Strip away the business model doublespeak, buzz phrase du jour language of Customer Relations Management, and it comes down to — “the customer is right.” Respect their opinions. Honor their requests. Charge them fairly and put your heart and soul into satisfying them. If you do, they tell their friends, and those friends tell theirs, and before you know it you’re James V. Zizzi and you’ve built over 250 magnificent custom homes on the East End — for some of the area’s most discerning clients. More importantly, you’ve built second and third homes for them. And have even gone on to build homes for their children.

Some builders look at a home they’ve built and see nothing more. James V. Zizzi looks at his homes and sees so much more. Perhaps because he’s building a following.

We LOVE You Abby

Our heroic little survivor of 107 operations can still smile and never gives up hope.

Abby needs your help to get better.

Abigail Dunham. A little 12-year-old girl from East Hampton has known pain all her life. She suffers from hydrocephalus, a neurological brain disorder. Abby has spent three years of her life in hospitals, been partially paralyzed, had infections spread to her brain, spine, kidneys, bladder and bloodstream. Three shunts in her brain connected to 10' of tubing help her live.

Family funds have been depleted as Abby remains in critical condition at Schreiners' Children's Hospital. Abby "Knows she'll get better." She desperately wants to go back to school to be with her friends.

Mortgage Matters

November 1, 2007

The Fed has done it again and cut interest rates for a second time this year by .25% bringing the fed funds rate to 4.50% and the Prime rate to 7.50%.

What does that mean for consumers?

Any consumer who has a home equity loan should cheer as the rates on their loans will drop by .25% the next time their rate is reset – which is monthly. While it may not be a huge savings, every penny does count and will help to bolster consumer confidence. Credit card rates and car loans will also benefit from the Fed cut which will help as well on the confidence side.

What about mortgages?

Mortgage rates follow the bond market - not the Fed-funds rate. The 10-year Treasury is the basic benchmark for mortgages today. Initially, bonds did not cheer the Fed cut and mortgage rates actually moved up after the announcement. Bonds, however, are data-driven and the weak earnings reports have cheered up the bond market and rates have settled back down – for now. We are in a very data-focused market – so any piece of bad economic news will help bond yields to fall and drive mortgage rates down. On the flip side, strong data will spook bonds and cause mortgage rates to go back up. Obviously, we hope for lower rates but not at the expense of the economy. The outlook for the balance of the year is very unclear – and the roller coaster ride continues.

Let's not overlook the fact that rates really are very attractive today with fixed rates as low as 6.00% - a great reason to get into the real estate game. As they say, you have to be in it to win it.

Ambulance Survey

The Ambulances Tell Us that Southampton Hospital is Doing Fine

By Dan Rattiner

Over the years, Southampton Hospital has had its ups and downs. There are times it's so packed you have to wait for a bed. And there are other times when practically nobody goes there.

A good measure to determine how Southampton Hospital is doing is to be located to the east of it and watch the ambulances that go down Montauk Highway heading westbound.

From my perch on the second floor of the Dan's Papers offices on the Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton, I have been doing this for years. Things are okay. And in recent months, they have even picked up. This is good.

Ambulances racing down Montauk Highway come from Montauk, Sag Harbor, East Hampton, Springs and Amagansett. They hurry along.

The sirens wail, the lights flash, the motorists scurry out of the way. There are back roads you can take from these communities to get to Southampton Hospital, but people don't take them. Best is the direct way. So as far as the Southampton Hospital is concerned — from the east anyway — this is it.

One measure showing how good Southampton Hospital is doing involves the speed of the ambulances. When the ambulances rush along, which they are doing now, it is a good sign. It means that good things await in Southampton. They may have lots of paramedics and oxygen and transfusion equipment on the ambulance, but things will really get better when they get to Southampton Hospital.

It has not always been like this. In some years — I've been watching this for thirty going through a rough patch, have them see me. That's not what the ambulances show.

The second thing to note is the volume of the ambulances. More is better. Less is worse. During those years long ago when you didn't see a whole lot of ambulances, you knew the reason you wouldn't see many ambulances was that the people who were sick simply said no, no to Southampton Hospital, and so they were simply choppered out to New York City or to

Long Island Jewish or to Stony Brook. You'd never see them on the highway.

It sure wasn't worth getting sick in those days.

Finally, there is the unmistakable fact that all these ambulances charging down the highway to the west toward the hospital these days, are almost never seen coming back.

I have a friend who says that all those that go do come back, but you don't notice it because they come back without all their sirens and lights, but I don't know. I think that when you see all these ambulances only going westbound it's because they go to Southampton and they stay in Southampton. Southampton Hospital is a terrific place. There are hundreds and thousands of ambulances from both recent and long ago trips, hanging around on the streets

If anyone tells you that the hospital has been going through a rough patch, have them see me.

years — the ambulances dawdle along. The best care they can give to those inside, they know, is right there inside the ambulance. Southampton Hospital is ahead. But it's not so good. So the longer it takes to get there the better.

I might note that dawdling ambulances like this have not been what I've seen for years. If anyone tells you that the hospital has been Hamptonites Jerry Seinfeld and Renée Zellweger have a sticky lawsuit on their hands — the slogan for their new film Bee Movie, which puns, "Give Bees a Chance," has allegedly already been a tagline. At least according to the BeeCeutical Company, who filed a lawsuit with the U.S. District Court in Ft. Lauderdale, stating that it coined the phrase in 2006. Neither party is giving peace a chance just yet.

SUSPECTS IN LINDA STEIN MURDER RELEASED

By Dan Rattiner

This community remains shocked at the death of Linda Stein, one of the Hamptons' most high profile personalities, at the hands of a brutal murderer in her Fifth Avenue apartment on Tuesday, October 30.

Stein was 62 years old, the mother of two daughters, a founding member of the punk rock scene years ago — responsible for the success of such groups as the Ramones — and in a second career, one of the three or four most successful real estate agents in Manhattan and the Hamptons. She arranged real estate transactions for Christie Brinkley, Sting and Trudy Styler, Billy Joel, Elton John, Madonna, Michael Douglas, Angelina Jolie, Calvin Klein and a host of others, and was friends with them all. She worked for Prudential Douglas Elliman.

Stein was funny, aggressive, irrepressible and irresistible. She stood just over five feet tall, had a loud, gravelly voice, and filled a room with her oversized personality. At 62, she lived on the 18th floor of an apartment facing Central Park at 965 Fifth Avenue. This building, at the corner of 78th Street, has security so tight that the doormen escort everyone to the elevator, which rises directly to each apartment, stopping not in a hallway but right in the apartment's vestibule. There, in that apartment, Stein lived alone. She had confidence that the security in this building — the doormen and the surveillance cameras in the lobby — made her safe. And so, she often left the front door separating the vestibule and the living room unlocked. There were her two grown daughters who came and went. There were lots of friends and business associates. She gave special people keys. She told the doormen who they were.

Sometime during the afternoon or early evening of Tuesday, October 30, someone entered Stein's apartment, and in the living room smashed her in the head with a sharp, serrated object. Her body was found that evening at 11 p.m. by one of her daughters, face down, on the living room rug.

Police investigators said there was no forced entry, no sign of a struggle and nothing stolen. They believe that whoever killed her knew her and that it was possible she let this person in. Beyond that, they are so far baffled by the crime. The surveillance cameras show no one coming up to her apartment between the time she last spoke to one of her daughters at 1 p.m. that Tuesday and the time her body was discovered late that evening. There are no clues. There is no murder weapon.

The police have interviewed her assistant

Raul Diaz Benal, her lover Francisco Arena, the people she worked with and knew, all the doormen and even some workmen who were in the building at the time of the murder. All have provided DNA, none have been charged, and none appear on the surveillance tape. In the most recent development as we go to press Tuesday night, November 6, the police cut out and took away part of the entry door frame to the apartment, to more closely examine what they believe might be a fingerprint on it.

Stein's funeral was held at Riverside Memorial Chapel on West 76th Street on Friday, November 2. It was jammed with punk rockers and Hollywood types and quite a few celebrities. One of Stein's daughters spoke. There was a bit of a scuffle as one group sitting in the front row refused to give up their seats for the family members. It was a sad affair for the most part. People, it is fair to say, were still in shock both at the passing of this remarkable woman and at what happened to her.

She will be remembered, always fondly, by so many.

New York City Fireman's Fight to Stop Westhampton Man's Suicide

By Dan Rattiner

At about a quarter of ten in the evening on October 30, a retired New York City firefighter named Daniel Duddy heard his cell phone ring. It was in another room in his house. And by the time he got to it, the call had gone to voicemail. But there was a message. And so he played it.

The message, exactly, was this. "Hi Dan. You know who this is. I have two hours left to live. When I'm done, I want you to take out everything I ever f-king asked you for. Thanks for all you did for me. I love you and all the firefighters."

At first, Duddy, who is 51 years old, thought that this must be a wrong number. But there it was, his first name and the fact that he was a firefighter.

Duddy lives with his extended family in a house in New Rochelle, which is up in Westchester County. Puzzled, he called in his wife Helen, age 51, and played the message for her. Then they called in their son Brendan, age 28, and played it for him. Brendan said they should call this person back. Whoever it was would have left their caller ID when they called.

The number was retrieved and dialed, and no one answered. But the voicemail recording said leave a message for Jack Kazmir. They did not know anyone named Jack Kazmir.

They did, however, now have the phone number. And so Brendan did a reverse phone search on his computer. Nothing came up.

Then he did a search on YouTube. And he found all sorts of video postings by a young man named Jack Kazmir. The man seemed disturbed. And in the video he talked about taking his life. All the postings had been made that very day.

was this young son that lived with them named Jack. Jack Kazmirczek. Jack Kazmir was Jack Kazmirczek.

At this point, Duddy's daughter Kelly came into the room, and they played the message for her. It was 10 o'clock. Kelly said they had better get right on this. And they all agreed.

On the house phone, Dan called the local New Rochelle police and told them what happened. His wife Helen, in the meantime, called information on her cell phone and gave them the area code of the call from Kazmir and asked the operator if she could connect them to the police department in that area code. The operator did. It was a town in Florida. And so Helen told that police department what was going on. She also told them about the YouTube videos. And she played the message on Dan's cell phone over her cell phone.

The police in Florida said they could locate a residence from a house phone number with that area code, but they did not think they could do it with a cell phone number. But they would try.

Now Brendan, still on the computer, had found blogs on the Internet from Jack Kazmir. The blogs were confused and bizarre. Jack Kazmir said he had bipolar disorder and that

Dan had, indeed, been a firefighter at the World Trade Center. Maybe this young man had made that connection.

"I think I know who this is," Dan said. "I recognize him. He lived in Westhampton Beach."

Several years earlier, the Duddy family had bought a vacation home in Westhampton Beach from some people named Kazmirczek. There had only been brief contact and after the sale, virtually none. The Kazmirczeks moved away. Dan remembered they were an older couple named Marion and Sophia. But there Reduce your home's energy use and environmental impact by up to 40% with LIPA's Home Performance Program.

Did you know that each year a typical home emits approximately 6 tons of carbon dioxide (CO₂) from all the energy it uses?

That's more greenhouse gas emissions contributing to global warming than the average car produces annually.

Make your home outperform the rest, environmentally and economically with LIPA's Home Performance with ENERGY STAR® Program. You may need one or more of the ENERGY STAR performance packages. Your Home Performance contractor will help you prioritize improvements identified during your Comprehensive Home Assessment based on estimated savings and costs per measure.

VANDALS GRAFFITI CARS. CLEANED IN A DAY.

The Hampton Subway maintenance team working in the Montauk Subway Yard cleaned the spray can graffiti that appeared in less than twelve hours on the side of all the subway cars on Halloween night.

"A few riders may have seen some subway cars all spray-painted on the morning of November 1," Commissioner Aspinall said. "But after that, the cars were all gleaming and shining like new again."

The security breach occurred at the Montauk Subway Yard sometime between midnight and 6 a.m. on Halloween, when unknown perpetrators picked the lock on the gate of the barbed wire topped chain link fence that surrounds the yard, went inside with spray paint and painted up the cars with phrases such as WHOOOOO, GHOST, WITCHES BREW. The perpetrators were gone before the first shift of maintenance workers arrived at 6 a.m.

All of the German Shepherd guard dogs that keep the yard safe at night were missing. It is not clear when they got out, if they got out on their own, or if they got out when the perpetrators came.

"At the present time, we have no suspects," said Montauk Police Chief Brendan. "But we do have clues. Two wooden broomsticks were found at the site. Also a Darth Vader mask. There are fingerprints on the empty spray cans. The spray cans were not on the premises before that night, nor were the two broomsticks."

Maintenance people were called in from all other stations for this emergency, and the graffiti was scrubbed off the subway cars very quickly. The last graffiti was removed about 11 a.m.

Homeland Security Agents have been called in to inspect the entire line to see if some of these perpetrators are still hiding somewhere on the line underground, a possibility since the yard entrance to the underground line is on the property.

COMMISSIONER BILL ASPINALL'S MESSAGE

It was a dastardly, cowardly act that was perpetrated on the subway-riding public on Halloween when persons unknown entered the subway grounds at Montauk. The extra overtime spent to remove it, of course, will have to be borne by the taxpayers. You can bet that we will leave no stone unturned until these criminals are brought to justice.

On the other hand, I want to compliment our maintenance crew on the speed of which this graffiti was removed under the direction of Union Chief Ben Harris. Harris has been selected as employee of the week. It is so noted at the start of this newsletter.

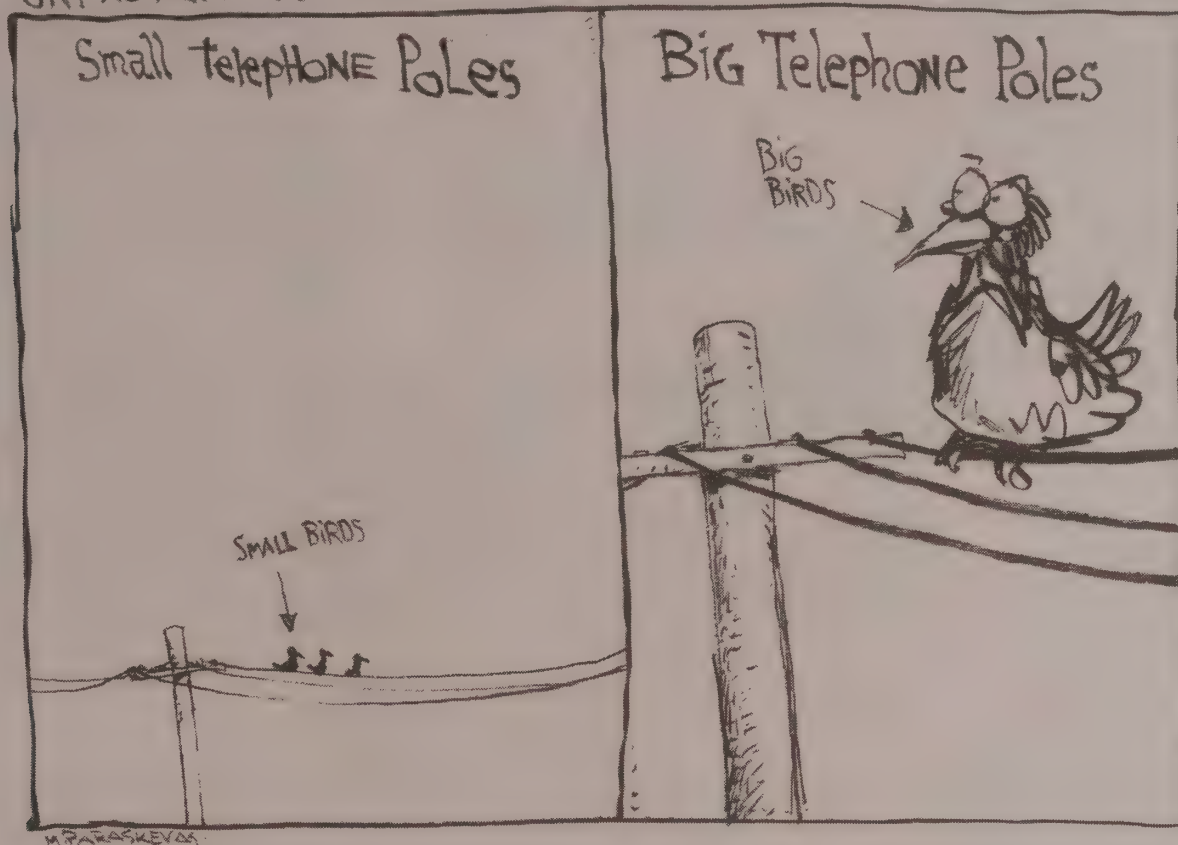

On another note, I want to allay public fears about the rumors that the Federal Transportation Authority will be shutting down the new Shinnecock to Sunrise Shuttle over construction irregularities. It is true

LIPA is Caught Making the Telephone Poles Taller in Southampton

By Dan Rattiner

It's fair to say that the Long Island Power Authority is bending over backwards trying to accommodate all the residents of this area when it comes to telephone wires. As you probably know, there is a need for new and heavier wires from Southampton to Bridgehampton, and there has been meeting after meeting with the residents of Water Mill — who will be most affected by the proposed high-tension wires — as to where they ought to go. This is new behavior. In years gone by, LIPA or its predecessor LILCO would without further ado simply put in the high-tension lines wherever they wanted to. And the people would just have to take it.

The upshot of all this is that after much discussion, the Water Mill people have come to the conclusion that somehow these wires will have to be installed, and if their first choice is to have them buried rather than above ground, which LIPA says will cost $29 million instead of $19 million, then maybe the residents of the Water Mill tax district will just have to foot the difference. Over thirty years divided by 1,724 taxpayers, it wouldn't be so bad. It would cost on average $193 a year per tax bill.

While all this goodwill and trust are flowing back and forth on this issue, I would like to point out something. It is the new wooden telephone poles that are being installed during the County 39 renovation.

What is going on here is that for these six miles, due to the road widening, the telephone poles are supposed to be moved back. Instead of moving them back, however, LIPA has decided to take this opportunity to replace the exist-

JUDGE REJECTS HAMPTON BAYS CASINO PLAN

By Dan Rattiner

In a stunning defeat for the dreams and hopes of the Shinnecock Indian Nation, a federal judge in Islip ruled last Wednesday that a five year effort by the tribe to open a gambling casino on land they own in Hampton Bays cannot proceed. Judge Joseph Bianco based his decision on four factors.

One is that the tribe is not recognized by the Federal Government.

Two is that the building of a casino on this land would cause highly disruptive and potentially disastrous consequences in traffic flow.

Three is that "various documents" from the Seventeenth Century clearly show that the tribe ceased to exist at that time and four is that the land in question does not qualify as land upon which aboriginal claims can be made. In order for land to be exempt from town zoning law — and the town has vigorously opposed the casino plan — it must be considered to have been in continuous tribal hands since aboriginal times. However, this land was sold in the nineteenth century to non-tribal residents, which established that town zoning would be applicable, and so when this land was sold back to the Indians in the early twentieth century it could not revert away from town zoning.

Although this decision was decisive and potentially crushing as far as the Hampton Bays site is concerned, it is appealable, and the tribe intends to do so.

How this judge Joseph Bianco came to be important in this situation is a story in itself. When the Shinnecocks bought back this waterfront property, which nobody disputes that they now own, the Shinnecocks went in and bulldozed a two-acre parcel of the 800 wooded acres where they intended to build the casino, and the town went in and stopped them, saying poles. They will put in all new ones. Fair enough. But as the picture shows, they are not just replacing the old with the new. They are replacing the old with new poles that are about TEN FEET taller than the old ones.

Now it may seem odd to some people that the residents of Water Mill are making such a big fuss about the proposed new overhead power lines. It's not that the place has no power lines. It's bristling with power lines on poles almost everywhere you go.

Water Mill residents must be blind not to notice these unsightly power lines, big and small everywhere, but you know, people get used to things. And then they don't see them. If there are 10,000 power lines stringing their way through Water Mill, and somebody asks would it be okay to string 100 more, suddenly it's such a big deal. The 100 they will see. The 10,000 they won't.

In addition, there is in this discussion the height of power lines. The wooden telephone pole wires are, gulp, 35 feet above the ground.

The big power lines are 60 feet off the ground. The local residents measure these new proposals in inches. And every inch counts.

So now LIPA pulls up 35-foot tall telephone poles, and they replace them with 48-foot tall telephone poles. And they don't tell anybody and they apparently think nobody would notice.

Well, goddamn it, I do. Have a look at this picture and tell me what you think. Shall we go down to these poles some night with tall ladders and chain saw them down to 35 feet?

Who does LIPA think they are? •

ing that clearing land this way was a violation of zoning laws. The Shinnecocks filed a federal lawsuit. And a Federal Judge, this judge, accepted jurisdiction in the case, even though the Shinnecocks are not a federally recognized tribe.

It was believed by many in the tribe that by taking the case, Judge Bruno was acknowledging the existence of the tribe, a fact that could lead to quick federal recognition of the Shinnecocks, something The Bureau of Indian Affairs had dragged their feet on since the Shinnecocks first applied for recognition in 1978. (It's a long line of tribes wanting recognition, apparently.)

Speaking personally, I have to say that three of the four reasons seem appropriate for the decision. The tribe is not federally recognized, putting a casino on this site will cause traffic chaos and was sold to non-tribal members and was subject to zoning for about a century. But I cannot imagine what documents prove that the tribe ceased to exist in the Seventeenth Century. There is a long and well-documented history about this tribe, from the day the first white men landed at Conscience Point in Southampton and were met by some of them, right up to the present day and this decision. There may have been times when the tribe was "officially" declared non-existent by somebody, and there may have been a time when some of the tribe members drifted away and later came

Candidates Consider that Stealing Opponent's Campaign Signs is OK

By David Lion Rattiner

While the country is preparing to watch the political smears of major candidates running for President, the Hamptons will be done with smear politics locally. The elections are over.

One of the primary political fiascos that has plagued not just the Hamptons, but other local office officials as well, has been the massacre of political signs.

We've all seen these signs endorsing a candidate planted on the side of the road, but some of us notice them one morning and then see them gone the next. This is because of the elevated level of sign stealing that has been going on this election year, and the accusations have been flying.

In Quogue, it is not so easy to steal a sign. With the hard nosed Quogue Police Department, who are known for being "annoyingly tough" when it comes to enforcing the law, this is one of the few communities that has been able to nab some of these sign stealers who look to sway the public vote by stealing their opposing candidate's road sign. The Quogue police arrested three men for petty larceny who were ripping out signs for the Republican candidate for Supervisor Linda Kabot and her GOP nominees for Town Board, Nancy Graboski and Dan Russo.

Of course, there was an outcry amidst everybody — Republicans, Democrats and Independents — that sign stealing was a crime and was a bad thing to do. But that has not stopped both parties from printing extra signs for their campaign, expecting the activity to happen. Local politics is local politics.

The local elections have not quite hit the national sleaziness that we have all seen, like attacking candidates on their personal lives, which can be attributed to both Democratic and Republican parties nationwide.

Being a crafty politician in Quogue is not an easy thing to be when you have a police department like the boys in blue over there. Back in

BERKOSKI ICE COMPANY LOBBIES FOR REGULATION

By David Lion Rattiner

One of the funniest and oddest businesses of the modern day is the tremendously successful business of bottled water. The highly-regulated business has a foothold on consumers and despite recent information suggesting that there is no real health benefit to drinking bottled water over tap water in most areas of the United States, billions of dollars are made from the business of shipping and producing different "brands" of H₂O.

Bill Berkoski is not in the bottled water business, but his business is not all that different from bottled water. However, Mr.

Berkoski and those that are in his business do not have to meet the same strict standards that the Federal Government demands for bottled water. Mr. Berkoski, who stands behind his product, welcomes any kind of regulation and safety standard that has been put into his product since he started his company. He is also headed to Washington, DC to try and make sure that this kind of regulation is implemented.

Bill Berkoski of Southampton Berkoski Ice and Oil is in the ice business and as a second-generation business owner, has been in the business since 1964 when it was operated out of his father's backyard. Frozen water is his game and he wants his business to be treated in the same way that bottled water is treated.

One would think that this is an odd move for a businessman in the ice business. After all, the less regulated you are, the easier and cheaper it is to produce a product. While this is true, Berkoski is not just thinking about making ice as quickly and as inexpensively as possible. He is also thinking about his customers, who have taken care of him just as much as he has them, and goes the extra mile to make sure his ice is of highest quality. He just wants everybody else in the business to do the same.

And so Mr. Berkoski called up his old friend Tim Bishop, the U.S. Congress Representative for Suffolk County and got a dialogue going. It didn't take long to convince Bishop that this was the right thing to do, and the pair met in Washington, DC over the weekend to discuss the matter.

Berkoski wants to protect both the consumer and his business. The E. coli outbreak that happened in spinach recently caught his attention. His logic is that it could have just as easily happened in the ice business and if something like that were to happen he would lose a lot of business. In many ways, lobbying for regulation in the ice business is not just about protecting the consumer, but also protecting the business of packing and selling ice as well. He has even written a paper on the issue entitled "Ice: The Forgotten Food."

With a little research done on the Internet, it is clear that Mr.

Berkoski has a very serious point to make. In a study that made national headlines, a twelve-year-old student named Jasmine Roberts in Florida did a school science project to compare the ice in fast food restaurants with the quality of water from the restaurants' toilets. The evidence that she found was striking. After selecting five fast food restaurants within a ten-mile radius of the University of South Florida, Roberts collected ice from the soda fountains inside of the restaurants from cups via the drive-through window and collected water samples from the restaurants' toilets, first flushing the toilet once. She tested the samples at a lab at the Southampton and East Hampton, however, sign stealing just seems to be a part of life.

Ways around the sign theft are threefold. One is, besides posting new signs once the old ones get stolen, is to mount large signs on the backs of cars that are not easily removed, and park the cars on the side of the road for the traffic flow to see. This is a simple fix solution if you have a car that you don't need to drive all day and if you have the cojones, shall we say, to expose to the hurling of soda drinks and cups of coffee.

Another way, of course, is to retaliate with accusations of sign theft and equally devious political attacks. This is what Town Supervisor Patrick Heaney did when the accusation of sign stealing was made by Kabot. In a debate that brought up the issue, Heaney did not hesitate to point out that Kabot used to involve herself in campaign related activity during regular business hours when she worked as Executive Assistant to the former Town Supervisor, Vince Cannuscio. Heaney also called a press conference to announce a search warrant being carried out on Kabot's aunt, who was housing 13 people with certificates of occupancy in four separate sites. Her aunt, now dealing with 12 misdemeanor charges, could be described as a casualty of this campaign war. But then again, if she was operating these sites in Quogue instead of Westhampton, one could argue that she may have just been a casualty.

All of this puts things in perspective a bit. Stealing signs on the road is the national equivalent to stealing airtime on the major cable networks. Accusing aunts is the same as accusing spouses on the national level. We haven't gotten there quite yet locally, but you could argue we are headed that way.

By the time you have read this, the political ruffles will be over, the votes will have been counted and the campaigning efforts that have hit nearly every restaurant in town will be done with. Our minds will go from protecting the environment, illegal immigration and taxes to more important national issues at hand. Such as...well...protecting the environment, illegal immigration and taxes. Oh and there is that war that everybody needs to think about as well.

Surf Meet Turns Dangerous

Young Surfer at Tiana, Drifting Out, is Almost Lost, Then Rescued

By T.J. Clemente

This is a "feel good" story, and the fact that it is true makes you feel even better. It involves bravery, courage, clear-headed thinking by young people and has a happy ending with a cash reward.

Surfing competitions happen at beaches and surf conditions vary each day. So as it happened when the Eastern Surfing Association held its scheduled event at Tiana Beach in Hampton Bays on October 20, conditions were tough, with over eight-foot waves. Eastern Surfing Association events are for surfers who range from as young as ten years old to legendary veterans.

Selena Mobley, a ten-year-old girl who was competing in the 11 and under competition, was out in the rugged conditions when the horn signaling that the heat was over was blown. Selena had positioned herself beyond the rough surf to avoid the discomfort of the passing eight-foot waves. Also competing that day, in a different category, were Ryan and Patrick Fallon, both of Montauk, who are students at East Hampton High School. Both boys are also East Hampton Town certified lifeguards, and the training they received from the town will prove instrumental in this story.

Surfing events have judges and other event administrators observing the surfers in the water. When some of these veteran and skilled eyes looked out at Selena they saw her drifting out to sea. She was in a perilous situation. The boys had completed their preliminary heats but were parked on their boards waiting for their next heat. Ryan heard the comments of concern for the young girl, and took action by swimming out to the girl, who was clinging to her board and perhaps didn't yet realize the danger she was in.

When brave 17-year-old Ryan swam out he was using the instinct that he had been given in his trained skill to make a "save." He did not exhibit the selfishness of considering that it

CVS HAS NOT YET APPLIED FOR SAG HARBOR PERMIT

By Debbie Tuma

In an effort to preserve its historic, small-town character, Sag Harbor Village is in the process of revising and updating their zoning code, which has not been changed since 1984.

With rumors circulating about chain stores like CVS possibly occupying the Water Street stores where 7-Eleven is now, and with the real estate market thriving in this popular harbor front community, the Sag Harbor Village Board is taking no chances on losing its quaint appeal.

"A year and a half ago, we started looking at our zoning code, with various developments in progress, and this past June we issued a moratorium on site plan review for any applications for commercial buildings or subdivisions," said Sag Harbor Village Mayor Gregory Ferraris. "We're now looking to extend this moratorium another six months, until we do an in-depth revision of our zoning code."

He added, "We have a good grasp on what we want to accomplish. We're trying to avoid the large-scale box stores coming in, and I feel we're in good shape. We feel we can keep the village character intact with such things as size restrictions and other actions. Box stores can still come in, but they'll have to adhere to our revised zoning code."

He noted that right now Sag Harbor has seven franchises in their village, including the Emporium True Value Hardware Store, the Sag Harbor Variety Store (a Ben Franklin store), Schiavoni's IGA and Ace Hardware Store. He said the average square footage of retail shops in this tiny village is less than 1,200 square feet.

But Ferraris said the Village Board is encouraging input from residents and the business community. "So far we have had three public meetings on the zoning code revisions, Moffitt Cancer Center where she found that 70 percent of the time the ice from the fast food restaurants contained more bacteria than the fast food restaurants' toilet water.

It is for this reason that Mr. Berkoski takes his ice so seriously. Mr. Berkoski uses self-imposed safety measures, using a quality control known as Packaged Ice Quality Control

Standards, or PIQCS, that teaches employees education and sanitary measures so that all of his ice machines are clean and that bacteria are unable to grow in them. Berkoski also pays an independent worldwide testing organization for food safety to take random samples using the same protocol as FEMA, which accepts only IPIA-certified ice for disaster relief. His business has never received a bad report.

And so the ice movement moves on in Congress, with Southampton's Bill Berkoski and Tim Bishop at the helm, ready to change an industry that we all rely on. Can somebody get me some ice by the way? My coke is getting warm.

may drain him of energy needed for the competition, but instead showed the stuff heroes are made of — risking their own safety to save another. However, it wasn't so simple. The conditions caused the girl to continue to drift outward.

Ryan's 15-year-old brother Patrick could see the difficulty he was having and immediately made the decision to swim out and use his expertise to help. Bravery and courage were exhibited again by the younger Fallon brother, who later said, "When I got there Ryan was trying to calm her down. She was clinging to him." Then, the brothers acted like a team that would make any parent proud. Patrick took possession of the surfboard to bring it in and Ryan used a cross arm live-saving hold to swim in with Selena through the eight-foot waves. However, the ocean had a mind of its own and would not cooperate. Though Patrick came in okay, Ryan was still in trouble with Selena. Many times the pair had to duck under breaking waves. In Ryan's own words, "At that point I thought I might be in trouble and looked toward the beach for more help."

Patrick, followed his brother and Selena's every movement as did so many others watched this drama unfold from the beach. He knew his brother needed further help and swam back out to assist again. With determination and skill the two boys, together now, brought Selena beyond the break and to the beach safely.

At the end of the day the boys had taken the first huge step in becoming men. They had exhibited a bravery that led the organizers of the surfing competition to give the brothers a sportsmanship award. The boys also received a $200 cash award for their bravery. The lesson the boys learned was best summed up by Patrick, who reportedly said the best thing about the incident wasn't the award, but the fact that, "We found out we could do it, we could save someone. It was cool."

The boys' proud mother Helene Fallon, a supporter of surfing, also received the Richard Ward Memorial Sportsmanship Trophy for her past work on behalf of the surfing community. However, it must be mentioned that, besides rescuing Selena, the boys did compete in the contest. Ryan placed first in the open division and also in the junior men's short board division. Patrick took second in the junior men's division. But at the end of the day they blew down the doors by being the heroes of the day.

Montauk Fisherman, Still Fishing at 84, Tells it as He Sees it

By Daniel Simone

"We used to go out less than three miles and catch tuna, swordfish, marlin, even shark. The Japanese would be waiting on the docks for the sport fishing boats to come in, and they'd buy all of our tuna. Oh yeah, we had the best tuna right here in Montauk," reminisced Bob Tuma, the oldest charter fishing boat captain in Montauk. "Imagine, the Japanese would come all the way here for tuna. But now you've got to go 50, maybe 60 miles out into the canyon to catch anything like that. It makes it impossible for most sport fishermen. You need a hefty boat to venture out that far into the ocean. You're not going out there on a 17-foot Boston Whaler," cautioned the veteran salty dog.

"The canyon" refers to a trench 2,000-feet deep in the Atlantic that is a favorite sport fishing field that attracts fanatic anglers from all over the world.

"And to make things even worse, now the government is making it illegal for commercial fishermen to fish for striped bass," added Mr. Tuma.

Striped bass is a species whose characteristics are desirable to the sport angling community, as well as to the culinary profession. It's a relatively large fish that averages, depending on its age, between 15 to 60 inches in length. It is feisty and powerful, and can formidably challenge and wrangle the most brawny and experienced sport fishermen. For these reasons striped bass is a coveted sport-fishing subject, and for many decades has brought pleasure to myriad anglers on the waters surrounding Montauk.

This particular bass also delights the most discerning palates. Its flesh is firm, tender and abundant. "When properly cooked it contains certain oils that can lower cholesterol levels and prevent the clogging of arteries," explained Mr. Tuma.

Now the problem at hand is that certain Federal Agencies have been directed by the

HAMPTON TRADITION XII — THE IDEAL

By T.J. Clemente

Since the 1860s, Sag Harbor residents and others have been walking through the doors of The Ideal, a stationery store located at 102 Main Street. This treasured tradition of the Hamptons has items in stock you won't find anywhere else. Terry and Gary Sanders, the owners of The Ideal, are throwback merchants to another time when service, friendliness and a huge inventory with a vast selection was a way of life in America. Gina Gardella, who has worked at The Ideal for the last three years, is a prime example of what is so right about this historic stationery store right in the heart of Sag Harbor. She explained that the store still has house accounts for regular customers. Ms. Gardella knows where everything is, how much it costs and in which colors it is available. This isn't just another place to buy greeting cards. It is truly so much more.

When you walk through the doors of The Ideal, you would never know that it has been functioning for nearly 140 years. Instead, you would notice things such as the special wrapping paper they offer for birthdays, house warming parties, religious occasions, hospital visits, and, of course, Christmas gifts. And they sell it by the exact amount you want, measured and cut. Not in the new marketing style of one-size-fits-all and throw away what you don't need. A selection of delicate French doilies hangs from the walls, as does a very luxurious selection of ribbons in many different colors, sizes and lengths. Nearby are the amazing bows and other adornments to make your gift-wrapping look over the top.

Concerning the almost lost art of writing letters, The Ideal still prints personal stationery and has a tremendous selection of pre-printed stationery as well as notecards. Just seeing this display encouraged me to write a thank you note to someone and send my daughters, who are away at college, a letter. When was the last time you used a fountain pen? They were for sale right there, with the ink cartridges.

Thinking of becoming an artist, or getting back to being the artist you once were? The Ideal has a fine selection of oil and acrylic paints. Then there are the watercolor pencils along with just plain drawing pencils. When was the last time you bought some charcoal to sketch with? Nearby are the canvases, papers and surfaces needed to exhibit or create your art, not to mention a very large and fine selection of paintbrushes. They even carry calligraphy sets complete with pen and ink.

I was dazzled at the selection of shopping bags hanging on one of the walls. Rows and rows of different colors, sizes and shapes. Speaking of construction, The Ideal has a huge selection of construction paper. Remember the endless supply in art classes growing up, and the different colors and textures? Well, that's what it's like at The Ideal.

Their magazine selection rivals that of any New York City subway stand. I found myself looking at magazines I hadn't seen in years out here in the Hamptons. Then I smiled when I saw the collection of stickers. I remember my daughters spent hundreds of hours putting stickers on pages of paper. There is also a fine collection of candy, chewing gums and even Altoids, right there at the checkout counter.

School supplies, such as wired notebooks in every size, ball point pens, binders, notecards and lined paper as well as computer paper are well stocked. Ms. Gordella even made a point to mention that The Ideal now carries computer printer cartridges. There is also a fine collection of the different types of scotch and masking tapes used for school projects or household needs. Bulletin boards are also sold in different sizes. And when you need to buy envelopes, this is the place, again with different sizes, colors and amounts available.

The atmosphere Terry and Gary Sanders have maintained for their thirteen years of stewardship at The Ideal has been one of small-town service, a tradition many feel is being lost in the Hamptons.

Ms. Gardella is very proud to work for wonderful people like the Sanders and it shows in the way she goes about her job. It is almost as if it is not work, but a volunteer service to the Sag Harbor community.

When you walk up to the big window with the old time gold leaf printing on the window that says "The Ideal," you are looking at another piece of the traditions in the Hamptons.

President to prohibit the sale of striped bass caught in offshore waters. In addition to this disturbing issue, President Bush has urged the states to consider restricting this fish to sport fishing, a situation that would deprive commercial fishermen of harvesting and fishing for this species, even in coastal waters. In essence, now it is only available if an individual goes out to sea and angles for the little monster. To fish lovers, this may be alarming.

Mr. Tuma, whose father and uncle organized the first sport fishing charter boat that operated out of Montauk in the early 1930s, assessed and clarified the state of affairs regarding the commercial fishing industry. "You know, today we have more and more people coming out here to sport fish. Modern electronics and navigating equipment can make anybody a navigator. Anyone can become a Christopher Columbus. Also, the pleasure boats are more reliable and seaworthy, so the congestion of sport fishing boats out there is ten times what it used to be. Not to mention the fact that people from all over the world are coming to Montauk to fish. Another thing, the modern GPS device is so accurate that it can bring you back to the exact spot in the ocean where you had last found a school of fish. It makes it all so easy that it takes the fun out of it."

Mr. Tuma further explained that over the years various State and Federal Agencies have been restricting the commercial and sport fishing industries with an avalanche of regulations. "They've been meddling into our affairs and every year they come out with more rules and regulations. I guess they have to keep a tight control because the fishing industry has grown and the volume is so much greater than it used to be. I mean, just to interpret the laws you have to be half a lawyer," criticized Mr. Tuma.

He also pointed out that the coastal waters are polluted in some areas, forcing environmental agencies to ban any type of fishing in those regions. For all these reasons fishing has sustained a dramatic evolution. However, Montauk is still unequivocally considered the sport fishing capital of the world. Its protrusion into the open ocean and the Gulf Stream, whose current cruises northerly some 95 miles east, are the salient factors in making this body of water host to a variety of fish. The Gulf Stream is a current of water approximately 300 miles wide and actually moves at about 6 miles per hour. During the warmer months of the year, certain species of fish swim into the stream and literally hitch a ride north, bringing an abundance of stock into the Montauk area for all types of fishermen.

"The fishing here in Montauk has always been great. I took over my father and uncle's charter boat, The Dawn, and my brother and I picked up where they'd left off. You know, angling has been in my blood ever since," recalled Mr. Tuma.

Impressively, at 84 years of age, Mr. Tuma still operates The Dawn, ferrying people to his favorite fishing spots and entertaining them with historical facts and an endless repertoire of fishing stories.

Black Film Festival

Featuring Lena Horne, Louis Armstrong and Eddie Anderson

By Evan Stern

Last weekend, the film American Gangster opened in Southampton, packing the United Artists multiplex for the highly touted black crime blockbuster. Down the street at the Parrish Art Museum, the East End African American Museum and Center for Excellence held its second annual Black Film Festival, featuring two major black crime films of its own.

Among the six films shown in the festival, which included family selections, classics and recent features, the 1943 MGM musical Cabin in the Sky anchored the day in the 4 p.m. slot. Tsotsi, the 2005 Oscar-winning story of a South African gangster, also received a warm reception at the 6 p.m. screening.

Although Ridley Scott's latest Denzel vehicle took the weekend, out-grossing Bee Movie by $6 Million, the Black Film Festival was truly the talk of the town, kicking things off Friday night with a gala at the Southampton Cultural Center. Local poets slammed over and between intermittent riffs of soul, jazz and a phenomenal rendition of Gnarl's Barkley's 2006 summer hit "Crazy." It was some sensation.

Teaming up with the Parrish, the so far virtual museum flexed its local connections, drawing patrons of all ages throughout the day. According to co-founder Bonnie Cannon, exhibitions by Latin American groups inspired the inaugural film festival.

Slated to occupy a Southampton space within a year, the East End African American Museum and Center for Excellence promises to bring black culture back to the Hamptons, where Cannon notes a dangerous disappearance of multicultural awareness over the past 30 years.

"Growing up on the East End, minority culture was scarce. After spending a decade in [Washington] DC, I was shocked at how little African American culture there is here. I want my kids to grow up with a sense of pride, integrity and inclusiveness. That's what the film festival is all about," she said.

Over cordials at local bars, the highlights of the festival ranged from live jazz to unbridled poetry to the soul food so perfect for a rainy Saturday in November. Unfortunately, the museum's review of films amounted to a one-size-fits-all collection of marginally "black" films, leaving Gangster as the final topic of discussion among the Hamptons' diehard cinephiles. Perhaps next year the East End Black Film Festival will premier some locally produced films, following up a 2007 festival gleaming primarily with poetry and music.

At this year's East End African American Film Festival, one film shown was Tsotsi, which won the Academy Award for Best Foreign Film in 2005, and was nominated in 2004 for the same award. Truly deserving the prestigious designation as best of the rest, Tsotsi is about a black South African gangster, and utilizes a tightly knit story, small production budget and descriptive cinematography that delivers a universal message about human truths that villages in Africa can understand as easy as villages on the East End.

The Museum and Center for Excellence understands and seeks to promote the universal human elements among diverse people through the lens of the history, culture and perspective of black islanders and Americans. Towards that end, Cabin in the Sky was a bold and appropriate Saturday selection. A classic Hollywood musical and product of the "Golden Age" MGM film factory, Cabin is such a primary piece of cultural significance that it requires a reflective anti-racist preamble stamped by the distributors. One cannot watch Lena Horne, Eddie Anderson and Louis Armstrong without cracking wise at the era's most prominent African American entertainers. Without question, Cabin still rests today as one of the greats. Yet whatever stereotypes manifest Anderson's Little Joe or Horne's Georgia Brown, society's perception as a reflection of 1943 is still a significant element to all in the community, not only minority moviegoers.

As for perceptions of a Vietnam era heroin trailblazer, American stereotypes of the black kings of the concrete jungle will forever exhibit the impact of Denzel Washington's performance in Gangster. The players involved, promotion and sheer rarity of great gangster films will ensure as much.

Technically, Gangster approximates Coppola's grandeur but lacks his subtlety — it emulates Scorsese's strength of character but not his mastery of music and sound. Years from now, a thriving East End African American Museum and Center for Excellence may screen American Gangster as a cultural timepiece, in a study of Hollywood's treatment of gangsters in its conception of the black antihero.

In the meantime, stay tuned to the actions of this museum — a cultural force on the move with a growing, rich collective of artists, curators of fine culture and local aficionados.

FURNITURE, BILLIARDS & MORE

Who's Here

By David Lion Rattiner

As you are reading this, it is tomorrow where Bill Rosenthal is, and he begins most conversations speaking in Mandarin, asking his business associates if they speak English. Bill Rosenthal, an East Hampton resident since 1995, is the CEO of Informa Performance Improvement in Asia, a worldwide company that employs 7,500 people in over 150 offices in 40 different countries around the world. According to the company's website, "Informa PLC is the leading provider of specialist information to the global academic and scientific, professional and commercial communities via publishing, events and performance improvement. A client can choose from over 10,000 events and training courses, 40,000 book titles, over 2,000 subscription-based services including journals, magazines, newsletters, real-time information and news services, unparalleled performance improvement solutions, hundreds of exceptional brands and 70 countries."

According to Rosenthal, who was speaking to me from Singapore via an Internet telephone connection his job is, "To be a mezzanine entrepreneur. We work with other companies and show them how to improve their businesses. Sometimes we'll walk into a business workplace and notice something as simple as mopping the floor or making the coffee that will improve it. Somebody like me enjoys getting things accomplished from the startup mode. At the same time my job puts me in a suit and in the boardroom, which keeps things interesting."

His business career can be described as being a serial entrepreneur. After growing up in Massachusetts just south of Boston and graduating from the University of Rochester, he moved to New York City to take a sales job (he claims to be both a Red Sox fan and a Yankees fan, but now really considers himself more of a New Yorker) and from there moved back to Rochester in 1987, where he founded his first company with a couple of friends from college. Called Logical Operations, the company published computer how-to manuals. "This was before those 'Dos for Dummies' books," he said.

The company became a great success for Rosenthal and he ended up selling it to Ziff-Davis Publishing, the company that today publishes PC Magazine and Mac Week. After a series of different ownerships, which included an IPO through Softbank and an acquisition by the firm Wasserstein-Perella, Bill's little startup was ultimately bought by NITT, one of the largest companies in India, and still exists

He continued, "Everything about East Hampton back then and today is really in many ways my ideal way of living. I love how when you walk into a store people know who you are and how you can have an account at the store. Every socio-economic aspect of the town is friendly and interesting, not too many people in the world get to enjoy that kind of a thing."

Rosenthal also added his business expertise to larger businesses that have moved shops to the area, trying to keep that feeling as well. "When it comes to the Hamptons, you'll notice that the big box businesses come in knowing that having a local flare is important. You'll notice that places like J. Crew operate a lot differently then they would in New York City."

After starting up many different businesses while living in East Hampton, including a mathematics startup and an online university startup with Kaplan University, Rosenthal and his partner of 20 years, Jerry Gebo, who because of marriage laws in New York are registered as domestic partners, along with their adopted son Adam Gebo-Rosenthal have since packed up their bags and gone to Singapore, traveling on the longest commercial airline flight in the world on the biggest plane in the world. The A380 Super Jumbo Jet took off for the first time with Rosenthal and his family on it. Rosenthal's hobby is commercial aviation, so when the opportunity to purchase business class tickets over an Internet auction came up when he wanted to travel to Singapore, he jumped at it. "The plane is just tremendous. We were in business class on the way there, which gave us enormous seats. For our return flight from Sydney last week, we had suites which were pretty wild. The suite almost felt like an office cubicle with a full-sized bed and door. It gives you tremendous amount of privacy. When you move to Asia, everything becomes relative, with air travel. When you live in the United States, a trip to California from New York feels like a long trip. But here, people will say to you that Sydney is not that far away when it takes eight hours to fly there. The trip from Newark to Singapore is the world's longest commercial flight, taking eighteen hours and forty minutes."

I asked Rosenthal if his family and he had experienced a high level of culture shock. "What has been most striking for me here in Singapore is how similar everything is back home. Like New York City, there are many different cultures packed into one area and almost everybody speaks a bit of English. Just like New York City, you can and over the next six months we will probably have one public hearing on this per month."

Regarding rumors of a proposed CVS coming into this village, Sag Harbor Building Inspector Al Daniels said he knows nothing about it.

"They've never contacted the building department with any paperwork. We have no permits or applications from CVS or any other chain store. As far as I know it's all rumors," he said.

Sag Harbor Village Trustee Ed Deyermond said "application for a box store has yet come in, and we're trying to limit the size of future stores coming in. We're in the process of going over our code to examine sizes and uses of buildings."

He said so far the biggest stores in Sag Harbor are the "anchor stores," like Emporium Hardware and Fisher's Antiques.

"But the question is, how big do we want to go?" Deyermond said. "Our village now is mostly comprised of small stores. We're looking at the vitality of the village and what it can accommodate. We're trying to identify what we have here now, from retail stores to restaurants, and what makes us vital."

He added, "There's a tremendous amount of activity in Sag Harbor. It's very hot real estate-wise, and it's up to us to monitor it."

Mia Grosjean, President of the non-profit advocacy group Save Sag Harbor, said her group is supporting the Mayor and the Village Board in rewriting the zoning code, in order to keep Sag Harbor a market village.

Her group has hired two different experts in planning and zoning codes, Dwight Merriam and Frank Fish, to work with them and the Village Board.

"What we're trying to do by hiring these experts is to expand the possibility of what the village could be capable of in terms of zoning codes and potentially a comprehensive plan," said April Gornik, also a member of Save Sag Harbor. She added, "We're looking at so many imminent developments that we want to make sure we know what our preservation possibilities are within the restrictions of the NYS law, which has tended to favor business court decisions."

Gornik and Grosjean said they also want to hear from local merchants and commercial property owners.

"The village is looking at huge changes in all directions and we're not against CVS per se, but we're basically against the idea of large box or chain stores in our small village," said Gornik.

Grosjean said her group has been working closely with the village and so far is happy with the process. "But we have to stay on top of this, because it's a moveable feast," she said.

experience different cultural sights and smells in one day."

Rosenthal is also excited to watch his son be exposed to so many different cultures, "It is just amazing watching him go through the day like this as if this is the way it normally is for people. My little one has gotten a real kick out of it. I wanted to experience living abroad, not only personally but for Adam as well. Kids that go abroad mature earlier and learn more and accept other people and cultures very well. Flying in airports can be a real exercise with patience, also. I think having him learn about so much culture first hand is pretty cool."

Of course, Rosenthal's heart reached out to the Hamptons over the telephone when he asked me how the weather has been. "Have the leaves turned color and is the town quieter?"

"Yes, we've had tremendous luck with the weather this year except for a recent storm," I told him.

Without hesitating for a second, he told me about the webcams he keeps at his home in East Hampton and how from Singapore, every day, he checks to see what the day is like back home.

TWENTYSOMETHING... By DAVID LION RATTINER

The Writers Strike

I'm no longer even lifting a finger. Not even for one little keystroke. I've joined my writing brethren and I'm striking until our demands our met. You won't even be able to read a single word from me from now on. Instead of writing, I'm going to get a job sewing clothes for The Gap.

I've been striking for three days now in solidarity with the Hollywood TV Writer's Guild of America, and I have to say, it has taken a toll on my ability to function in daily life. As a writer, it is difficult for me to even go through life without writing every once in while. But I'm sticking to my guns. Sometimes, I catch myself thinking about writing a funny article without even realizing it. But so far, I have been able to control my desire to bang away at my laptop or bring a pen to paper.

Instead, I have been learning to sew through The Gap's educational website, which has been really great because while learning how to sew, I'm also learning a lot of Hindu. I've also been talking in Hindu in Internet chat rooms with fellow co-workers. I know that the way I write in Hindu must be similar to the way a child writes, but nobody seems to mind so far. They are so polite over there, unlike these rich big-wigs who think that they can take advantage of the little guy here in America.

I've become obsessed with keeping my fingers busy because I don't want them to get out of shape. My girlfriend does not seem to mind about me striking at all. I also have other finger exercises that I've been practicing so I don't lose my "stuff" such as excessively hitting the buttons on the elevator at the East Hampton Library. Yes, I go to East Hampton Library. I know that is shocking, but I'm not just a piece of meat for you all to gawk at. I also have a brain.

I've been beefing up my resume just in case sewing for The Gap doesn't work out. With my Degree in Finance from Northeastern, I figured that it would be a good idea to send my resume out to Merrill Lynch because I heard they just fired somebody. Maybe I could get that guy's job. Even if I screw up, I still walk away with millions. That sounds like a good deal to me.

Tomorrow I'm attending a picket line in New York City to strike with my writing brothers. I stayed up all night trying to think of a good catch phrase to put on my picket sign, but I got writers block.

IS NOTHING WORKING FOR ME ANYMORE!!!

I called up my buddy who is a fellow writer in New York City for an esteemed talk show to ask if he was willing to help me come up with a good catch phrase for my picket sign.

"Hi Bob, you've got to help me with my picket sign catch phrase for the march in New York City tomorrow. I was thinking, 'Writing for Pay Will Keep Hollywood Gay,' but I didn't think it was worth getting anybody upset over."

"Sorry Dave," my friend said, "But I'm on strike already and can't help you out."

Bastard.

"I don't know how long I'll be able to hold out man. My fingers are getting kind of antsy."

"You'll be alright, pal."

"Hey Bob, listen, I was thinking that maybe we could organize another picket march against the war in Iraq sometime."

"What are you nuts? We can't protest two things at the same time."

"I guess you're right Bob. I guess you're right."

FREE CENTRAL AIR-CONDITIONING FOR 1 YR.

PURCHASE FURNACE AT 1/2 PRICE AS SUMMER WINDS DOWN

LOCAL CONTRACTOR REVEALS WHAT OTHERS REFUSE TO TELL

Most anyone in business has their busy and slow times. The heating and air-conditioning industry is no different, and fluctuates dramatically with season and weather. Like now the fall weather is too mild for either A/C or heating. This is literally how it works. When we get to peak hot or cold seasons two things happen 1) our sales and service staff have more work than we can handle. 2) The demand is so high; there is no reason to discount the price.

In the off-season the a/c and heating business slows down to the point where our installers are sitting around without much work. Many companies lay people off in these slow times and hope to replace their skilled workers when business picks up. This is not a good business practice and is unfair to the employees and their families.

Other Dealers have refused to compromise and let the public know this, but at Flanders's we value our skilled workers greatly and would rather keep them busy, even if it means making little or no money. To do this, I'm going to slash the price of our first rate A/C and Heating Systems.

Here's my offer:

Purchase a Premier Central Heating & Air-Conditioning System (furnace and a/c) and I'll Give you a high efficient furnace at 1/2 the normal price. Plus take one year to pay for the system W.A.C (with approved credit)

If you need only an A/C or Furnace, I'll still give you a discount off the cost of the equipment plus guarantee at least 25% energy savings or I'll pay you double the difference of any unrealized savings during the first year.

You see, September through November is a slower time of the year for my company. With Back to school expenses and last minute summer vacations coupled with the fact that summer is over & winter isn't started yet, folks are putting off buying A/C till next year. It's also not cold enough for the heating season to start or do furnace replacements. So by helping us now we'll pass big savings on to help you, a true win, win.

With your new Air-Conditioner and/or Furnace, we will go the extra mile to give you up to 10 years Parts and Labor warranty against any future repair bills. That's a full decade!!!

Free for 1 Year; As I stated earlier you'll not have to pay for this system for up to a year with our 365 day No Payment and No Interest. You see while most folks are waiting till next year to purchase a/c you'll get to enjoy a/c though the remaining of the hot times in comfort and lock in 2007 pricing, all while not having to pay anything till 2008. Not to mention getting a more efficient furnace before winter gets here, you'll start saving real energy dollars right away.

Here's my offer:

Summary:

- Purchase a Premier A/C system and get a hi-efficient furnace at 1/2 price.
- Guarantee 25% energy savings
- Don't pay till Summer 2008
- Repair free Warranty for up to 10 Years
- The best in quality and efficiency.
- 1 Yr. No Interest No Payment.

Plus all our systems are covered by our Exclusive 365 day 100% Unconditional Satisfaction Money Back Guarantee.

So call Flanders Heating & A/C. Today for your free no obligation survey at 631-727-2760
(Monday - Friday 8:00am - 5:00pm)

This offer expires November 30th, 2007 or after we fill 37 installation slots, whichever comes first. At that time our schedule will be full and the savings will go away.

Early Bird Special: If you're one of the first 10 people to call, we'll include a Free Accessory with the purchase of a Heating & A/C system, a $650 value.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #472

11964 vs. 11965

I've been avoiding writing about this sensitive subject for over five years now. Everyone on the Island talks about it, but never to anyone who works at the Post Office, is related to someone who works at the Post Office or might want to get a job there in the future.

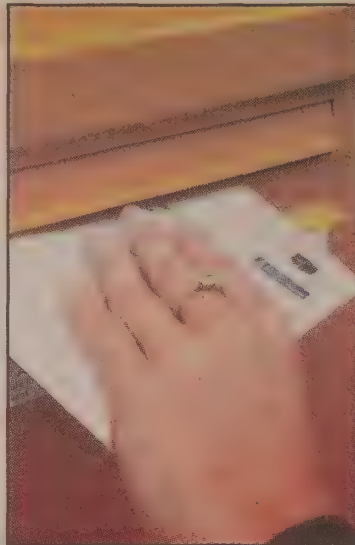

Here's the secret — Shelter Island is only 28 square miles. We have two Post Offices. Each Post Office has a separate drop box for "Island Only" mail. If your mail doesn't go to one zip, it has to go to the other. Everyone on the Island knows that, even the people who work in the Post Office know it, and the residents know that the Post Office people know it. But, if you write the wrong zip code on the envelope (we're only talking a difference of one digit, easy to make a mistake), terrible things can happen.

Everyone makes a sincere effort to write down the correct Island zip code. If you put in the wrong one, the letter is generally returned to you for the correct zip. That is the legally correct thing for the Post Office to do, but it frustrates the sender who wonders, "Why don't they just send it to the other Post Office?" Sometimes they do, sometimes they don't. The sender pencils in the one digit change, puts on a new stamp and drops it back into the box. I'm sure it irritates the postal worker who wonders, "There are only two zip codes here, why can't they get it right?" and the sender who wonders, "There are only two zip codes here, why can't they just forward it to the other one?"

The solution is so simple that I don't know why I didn't think of it ages ago. There's enough land behind the Center (11964) Post office to move the Heights (11965) there. If the two Post Offices are side by side, they can put a big vacuum tube between them and shuttle all the incorrect mail to its only other destination. It's brilliant and I know we can do it. Besides, the Island desperately needs a shoe store and the Heights Post Office location would be perfect.

Until then, I propose we transfer the wrongly zipped Island mail by carrier gull. We have lots of seagulls here and they aren't doing anything useful as far as I can see and they fly back and forth all the time anyway, so why not turn them into a shuttle service? The Post Offices can tie a chicken bone to a letter and throw it in the air for the gull to catch. The gull will carry it to the other Post Office, where the worker will untie the letter and give the gull the chicken bone for his reward. Now, some of you are thinking, "Well, why not just have the gulls deliver the mail to our homes?" Train gulls for home delivery? Please.....get real.

Another option is carrier lab. The Labrador is the official Island dog, so let's give them a job. We can't give them chicken bones, of course, but they'll still work for cheap. For a bag of bacon strips, we can transfer Island mail all day!

Then, there's always the possibility of putting the mail in a magnetized pouch and slapping it onto an Island car that you know is on its loop. All Islanders have a loop run. That's when they go to the dump first, hardware store or pharmacy second, then they head down the hill in front of the Heights Post Office — someone throwing a magnetized pouch can't miss — then they head to the IGA and their last stop is the Center Post Office. How do you know that their last stop wasn't going to be the Heights Post Office? Simple, the Post Office is always the last stop. If a car is in the Heights, smells of garbage — but there is none — and doesn't have any groceries yet, they're on their way to the Center Post Office.

So a longtime Island problem now has some viable solutions.

You're welcome.

Dan's BOOK REVIEW: The Bully in Your Relationship

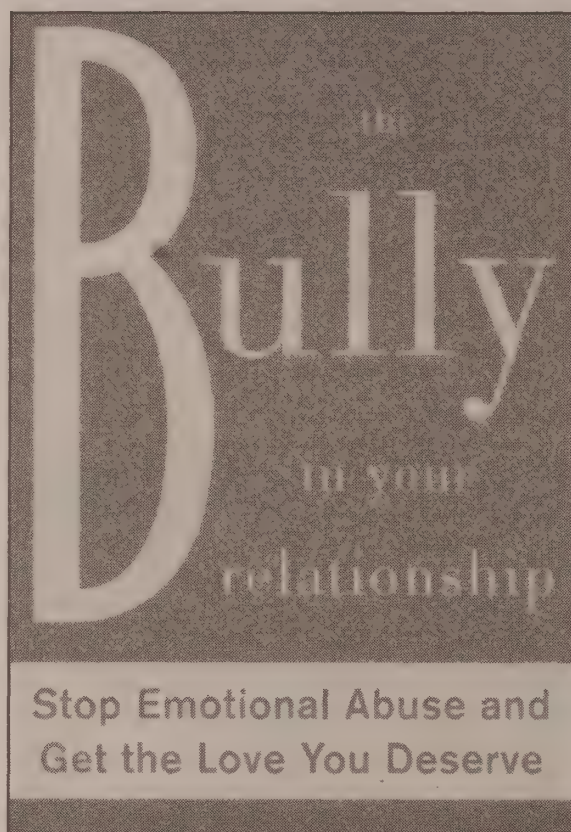

By Jim Marquardt

When we come across self-help or inspirational books, we usually tend to tune out. We see the authors on morning TV shows and get the impression that they kicked around ideas with a publisher and then trumped up enough kabuki to fill 250 pages or more. Maybe that's too cynical. No doubt there are as many qualified authors with worthwhile messages as there are hacks working the marketplace.

Anne-Renee Testa, a psychologist with over 20 years of experience, is certainly in the well-qualified category, and for those who suffer from a bullying partner, she has written a detailed guideline for change, appropriately titled The Bully in Your Relationship. She warns that the process requires courage and diligence, but claims that victims of bullies can correct their painful situation and indeed improve their lives by following her A.R.T. Method — Acknowledge the Problem, Reassess Your Options and Take Action.

She begins by describing bully types and the weapons they wield — rage, silent treatment, control freaking, score keeping, name-calling, temper-tantrum, money, sex, passive-aggressiveness and guilt tripping. The bully might be a husband, wife, girlfriend or boyfriend, someone you can't walk away from, or think you can't. For the most part, she's not talking about physical hurt. "The most insidious form of bullying is emotional abuse. It is repeated and often-covert behavior that degrades you, makes you feel worthless. The behavior can range from the most blatant insult to the subtlest criticism. Constant denigration, fault finding and deprecation all constitute emotional bullying."

Bullying, Testa writes, eats at self-esteem, health and the ability to work, love and be happy. Unloving, bullying parents plant the roots of this malaise. They create future bullies who externalize their pain and rage, as well as future victims who identify with the abused parent and learn to internalize their suffering. A person with healthy self-esteem wouldn't stay in a toxic situation. People who tolerate it have been programmed to expect abuse, creating a co-dependent relationship.

Victims cope by making excuses. They deny, rationalize, avoid potent situations and may seek distraction in affairs, compulsive behavior and substance abuse. Fear of confrontation and change keeps them from discussing the problem with the bully. Recognizing one's self in these coping mechanisms is the first step in Testa's method, which she refers to as acknowledgement. Testa devotes an entire chapter to bullying in the bedroom, saying, "Your sexual relationship can be a fairly reliable barometer for your relationship as a whole." To a bully, she says, sex is about power.

She directs victims to respond to a list of questions under the heading, "What ideas do I have that keep me from speaking up or getting out?" For the second stage in her method, Reassess Your Options, she outlines seven exercises that will guide you to review your past, evaluate your present situation, reassess your options for the future and prepare you to take action.

Testa says victims should understand that the bully in their relationship is also a victim, that they too live in pain and fear from what was inflicted on them in childhood. "Be strong and confident in the knowledge that your partner's bullying has nothing to do with you, that you are not the cause of your partner's bad behavior."

When she reaches the Take Action Stage, Testa presents six strategies (she loves lists) that victims can adapt to their situation, three addressing the partner's bullying and three about creating a new, healthy model for the victim. This final stage involves planning responses to the most common bullying situations, even to what might be said, or making the first move by bringing up the problem. It's important to respond calmly and rationally to abuse rather than reacting emotionally.

Testa acknowledges that change will not happen overnight. The victim needs daily reminders to achieve established goals, keeping notes to chart progress. A section boldly headed "The New You — With or Without Your Partner" makes it clear that her process can have serious, but hopefully positive results.

Will any adult, no matter how victimized, have the stamina to follow Testa's advice or to change a deep-seated self-image? Perhaps they will if the pain is bad enough. At least the book might give victims some insight and help them find some relief.

Readers of The Bully may recognize some of the clichés that seem to be endemic to the self-help genre. The author frequently advises taking "a deep breath" when contemplating a difficult situation. "You can do it" and "You don't have to take it anymore" and "You did it, congratulations!" often pop up.

It would have been useful if she talked about how abused partners can avoid making their children into future bullies and victims. A chapter on bullies in the workplace would have also been interesting. And youngsters certainly could use advice on dealing with bullies at school or play. Nonetheless, Anne-Renee Testa has written a detailed guidebook for bullying victims to improve their painful circumstances, and to help them get along with, or get away from, troublesome partners.

near the hospital taking it all in, is what I think.

I do agree that there are a few cases where you see them coming back, but when you do they always come back empty, with the paramedics back there drinking coffee and having sandwiches. So everybody they deliver gets dropped off and nobody has been turned away. It says a lot about a hospital when they have this 100% successful delivery rate, it seems to me.

Incidentally, I have some friends who live to the west of the Southampton Hospital in Hampton Bays and Westhampton Beach and they want to issue a report on what they see as far as the ambulances go. But I tell them their data is tainted. People to the west of Southampton Hospital often go to the hospital in Riverhead or Patchogue. You can't issue a true scientific study when you have a big variable like that. So forget it.

Anyway, that's it for my take on the state of Southampton Hospital. I've got my own ambulance downstairs that's just pulled up. Gotta go.

back, but declaring the tribe non-existent just ignores the facts on the table.

There are those who will say that the deck was stacked against the tribe in this matter, but it seems to me that Judge Bruno did what he thinks is a fair and honest job.

What remains is that the tribe still lives near or below the poverty line and nothing is being done. There are about 600 tribal members living on the 800-acre tribal reservation, a peninsula on Shinnecock Bay, where there is no zoning. Few services and a ruling government make up a tribal council, which only in recent times has been elected by a vote of the entire tribe.

The drive to create a gambling casino for the Shinnecocks began about ten years ago with the arrival of a wealthy Japanese developer named Ivy K. Ong who paid several hundred thousand dollars to the tribe, established an office on the reservation and pledged several million dollars to put together a gambling casino for the tribe, with him retaining a financial interest in it. He had successfully done this before for tribes in California.

Ong and the tribe ran into sharp opposition from just about everybody over the plan, particularly since it seemed open ended, intended to be beyond the reach of zoning and thus intended to be potentially so large as to very likely change the very fabric of the Hamptons. About three years ago Ong packed up and left.

The problem for the Shinnecocks is that they want to keep their tribal ways, and yet fully participate in the affairs of the community around them that is fully westernized, economically developed and now populated with fancy cars, big homes and all the rest of it.

And the tribe just doesn't fit in. As a tribe they own their land in common, and so with no individual equity, they lack the basis for mortgages and credit, health and education. The tribe is in the position of having to abandon the reservation to get these things. They don't want to do that. And they shouldn't have to do that.

It is what it is. And a generation ago, the Federal Government ruled that exceptions could be made to allow tribes to own and profit from gambling casinos.

But where and at what size? I recently returned from Natchez, Mississippi. There are two riverboats tied up there where the local citizenry can go gambling — bow tied croupiers, slot machines, the works — and it does not particularly impact the community in any grand way. It is something else to do, go down and spend a day on one of the riverboats.

I am not suggesting any riverboat here. But I think when all is said and done, it would be a good idea for the Shinnecocks to try to arrange for a more modest gambling facility on the reservation they own, or at an agreed upon location elsewhere — perhaps at the Riverhead Grumman site — where economic benefit could accrue for them in Southampton at a level that would be helpful but not make all the neighbors crazy.

Lower Mortgage
Payments by 45%

Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Programs

NY - A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, lowers monthly payments by 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and prepayment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages.

Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find. The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a FREE REPORT "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

that there is a little bump on this subway halfway between the two stations. The tunnels were built in a hurry from both ends to meet up in the middle. As it is a six-mile total run, you might expect it might be a little off. I would not worry about it.

As for the German Shepherd guard dogs that apparently got out during the spray painting of the trains on Halloween night, I would like to note that we are seeking replacements and hope to have the yard secured soon. We now have the yard manned 24 hours a day by regular employees, an assignment that might stretch our regular service thin, particularly at token purchasing booths, but we will continue to man Montauk, paying overtime, until new dog replacements are found or justice is served.

In the meantime, help us try to find our German Shepherds. They are probably off in the woods of Montauk somewhere. If you find them, do not approach them, as they are highly trained and quite fierce. Instead, call 631-4SU-BWAY and we will pick them up.

The German Shepherds look very much like all the German Shepherds I saw in Montauk yesterday on leashes, prancing along with their masters. I'm told there has been a surge in the popularity of these wonderful dogs in recent days. I hadn't been in Montauk in a while. It is good to see such happy dog owners with their pets. At least now you know what to look for.

he believed that the World Trade Center had been brought down by the American Government.

Dan had, indeed, been a firefighter at the World Trade Center disaster. Maybe this young man had made that connection.

"He must think you are a victim of the conspiracy," Brendan surmised. "He could trust you."

At this point, on his blog, they came upon Jack Kazmir giving his home address. Immediately, they called the Florida police.

Just after midnight, the police in Florida knocked at Jack Kazmir's door. There was no answer. In emergency cases, police do not need a warrant to enter a home. And so they broke into the house. Inside, they found Jack Kazmir, unconscious, with an open bottle of pills nearby. The paramedics were called. And they saved his life.

This story was related to this newspaper by Dan's daughter Kelly Duddy.

"My father is certainly God's angel," she said. "This is not the first suicidal person to reach out to him for help. In January of 1982, my dad was driving home from his work as a probationary NYC firefighter when he heard a man calling for help in the East River. He pulled over and jumped into the icy waters, braving hypothermia, to save him. The drowning man had jumped from the 103rd Street Walk Bridge to commit suicide but changed his mind when he hit the water. Luckily, my father was there."

Dan's North Fork

The North Fork Security Initiative

People Would Dress Better, We Would Track Suspicious Osprey Nests, Etc...

By Phyllis Lombardi

Remember that old TV show, "Candid Camera?" It was not one of my favorites, but folks used to talk about it – we got a chance to see ordinary people doing ordinary things, not knowing they were "on camera." Maybe because it seemed so sneaky was the reason I disliked it. I'm not sure.

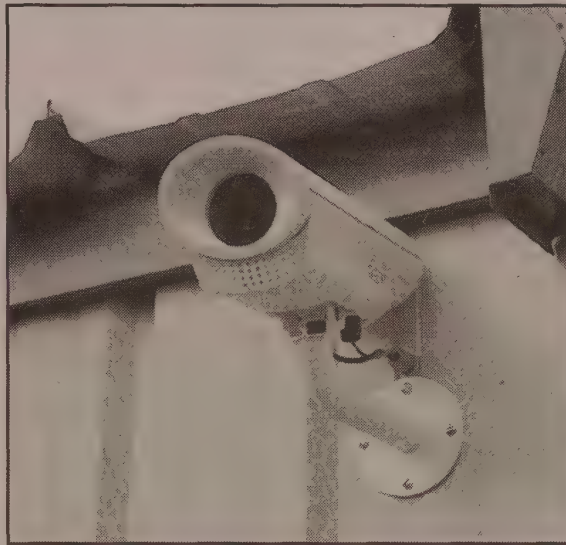

But this I do know. Starting next Fall in lower Manhattan, "Every car, truck and human movement will be eyed by a network of closed-circuit cameras," programmed to search for things suspicious. New York City police chief Ray Kelly is putting in this program – called The Lower Manhattan Security Initiative – which will utilize 3,000 cameras.

I wonder if this program would be good for the North Fork? Most of us love this place so much we'd be willing to do about anything to protect it. Even if the cameras caught us in an indelicate situation.

If that's the case, I can help and you can, too. We can go around with our cameras and snap photos of people doing suspicious things on the North Fork. Then we can give the photos to Riverhead's chief of police, David Hegermiller, or to Southold's top cop, Carlisle Cochran.

For instance, at 8 a.m. one day last week, I stopped my car at the traffic light on Main and New Suffolk roads in Cutchogue – right in front of Old Town Art and Crafts Guild.

I watched as a car pulled into the Guild's driveway. A guy jumped from the car, reached back for a large brown-paper-wrapped package, and then ran to the Guild's front door. (He left the car door open – doesn't that mean quick getaway to you?)

Emerging from the Guild a few seconds later, he raced back to his car and sped off. Without the package! Did he leave something bad at the Guild? Was he a terrorist? If all this had been caught on a camera rigged up at the intersection, I know I'd feel much safer on the North Fork.

This next involves license plates. Specifically, dirty license plates. I was in Riverhead in a doctor's parking lot (after surgery I've been there often) and this one day my husband and I were about to start home when a car pulled up next to us. The car was very wet and I asked the driver if there'd been a quickie rain shower close by, say in Aquebogue. No, he said, there wasn't. He claimed he lived a few streets away from the parking lot and had just washed his car. But why, then, I thought, were his license plates all dirty? I couldn't make 'em out. If they had cameras at the Riverhead traffic circle on Route 58, the guy would probably be in jail right now, and not a threat to the North Fork.

Way out at Orient Beach State Park in Orient, I came across something mighty peculiar. First, I want you to know I love that place. All year long, even in winter, my husband and I pack a lunch and head east to the park. We choose a table in the winter sun, eat our sandwiches, drink our hot tea, and just feel good and warm.

On a recent sunny Thursday, we witnessed something strange. As we were eating our lunch, we observed a middle-age guy sitting on a bench. He was reading a newspaper. Suddenly another guy walked up to the bench, sat down and took the paper from the first guy. Then the first guy walked away from the bench, got into a car parked in the lot, and drove away.

This has to be bad news. Now if cameras had been placed at Orient Beach osprey nests – why, we'd be able to identify these characters. Probably all this surveillance is a good idea for another reason, too. North Fork men will keep their hair combed and our women will be sure to wear their most dazzling earrings. Then, on- or off-camera, we'll be a better-looking bunch. Who'd not want that?

On a wet, cold and windy evening, ducking into the Birchwood was a magical transformation to a surrounding of warmth, both from ambience, the welcoming fire and the equally welcoming greetings from the staff. This is a hometown restaurant that has been in the middle of what is known as 'Polish Town USA' since 1929 and over all that time has only had four owners. The current owner is the engaging entrepreneur Jimmy Loo, who also owns the Village Crossroads in Calverton and Birchwood on the Park in Southampton. Daryl Sulzer started at the Birchwood thirteen years ago and for the past three and a half years has been the manager of both the Tap Room restaurant and the extensive catering operation for the Champagne Room. They proudly claim to offer the best value wedding package and can host up to 180 guests.

For our dessert, again we shared the pumpkin bread pudding from the dessert specials list and this was deliciously moist and had great tastes enhanced by a distinctive rum butter sauce.

Appetizers, apart from the pupu platter, are $4.95 to $9.95; main courses from $12.95 to $21.95 and include soup or salad. Desserts are $4.50 to $4.95. Beers are a specialty of the Birchwood and they feature eleven draft varieties and eleven bottled beers.

The Birchwood owes its longevity to a combination of good wholesome food at very reasonable prices that enable a family to eat out without needing a second mortgage, plus excellent friendly, professional service. It is a great place for a casual drop in, a party, or a family event and the tables are also well spaced and cozy enough for a romantic evening. Jimmy told us that after acquiring the Birchwood he looked at the operation in detail for six months and then decided to leave everything as it was apart from some interior modifications, including the installation of the fire. From what we saw, that was a very wise decision.

— Roy Bradbrook

The restaurant has a host of memorabilia on the walls, covering baseball to Broadway. Large model planes and rowing skiffs hang from the ceiling. There is an impressive bar, wood paneled booths, Tiffany style lighting and a staff that knows the names of most of their patrons. Their slogan, "Your meeting place for good food, good cheer and good times," is not an idle boast.

The menu is extensive and as you would expect, includes a good selection of Polish dishes, which are among the most popular items. Diners come from far afield and Executive Chef Mary Livingstone and her sous chef Lori Seibert make sure that no one goes home hungry, as we soon found out.

The main menu rarely changes but every day there are a good number of specials and we started with some succulent crispy corn fritters served with a horse radish cream sauce that made sure that you were warm inside as well as out. I love horseradish and found this to be a different and excellent combination. By the way, they feature an 'appetizer' listed as the 'Ultimate pu-pu platter' that contains chicken wings, spare ribs, pierogis, kielbasa etc., and which is listed as a dish for two or more people. Peggy, our very attentive waitress told us that there have been only a handful of occasions when one person has eaten everything on this platter!!

We contented ourselves with sharing a cup of excellent split pea and vegetable soup, again great for a cold evening and very well balanced in tastes and texture.

From the main courses that range from pastas to American entrees as well as Polish specialties, we decided on one Polish dish, a combo of pierogi, kielbasa, golomki (cabbage stuffed with meat and rice in a tomato sauce) and potato pancakes, that was a great blend of authentic Polish tastes. The kielbasa was certainly among the best ever and the stuffed cabbage was light and delicate. The other dish was one of the evening's specials, Portobello sirloin with gorgonzola, red peppers and a balsamic drizzle. Again, the portion was extremely large and the steak was well marbled, cooked exactly as requested and full of juice and flavor. The accompanying vegetables were good but really needed to be a little more tasty to effectively complement the steak.

OVER THE BARREL...

The Consistency That Is Wolffer Estate

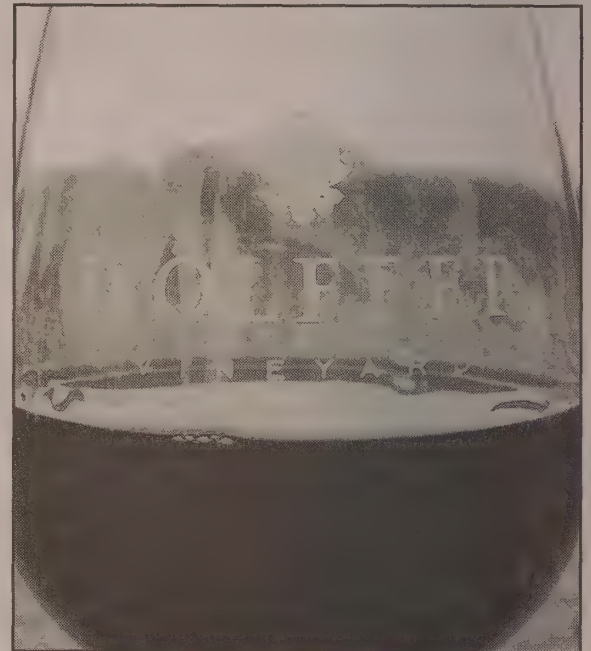

When compared to places like the Napa Valley, Long Island is a tough place to grow grapes and make wine. Recent warm year vintages and a moderate, maritime climate mean that grapes may not ripen fully in cooler years. Humid summer days can lead to mildew and rot. And hurricane season can bring devastating rains too. Local vineyard managers would probably find growing grapes in California pretty easy—even boring.

Wolffer Estate in Sagaponack, with winemaker

Roman Roth and vineyard manager Richard Pisacano at the helm, seems to crank out consistently good wines every year because of their skill and fantastic vineyard. Sure, with most of its portfolio centered on merlot and chardonnay, you won't see much experimentation at Wolffer, but sometimes consistency trumps whimsy.

On a recent trip to Wolffer's gorgeous tasting room, breathtaking vineyard views did not — and the wines certainly did not-disappoint.

Wolffer Estates' 2004 La Ferme Martin

Merlot ($14) is an unexpectedly interesting red for the price — especially with a little decanting. The aromas are mostly fruity, with red raspberries, red cherries, a little vanilla and a sprinkling of sweet spice. The palate is similarly fruity with soft, medium-light body dominated by cherry flavors, hints of chocolate and more spice. Well suited for everyday drinking, over 2000 cases were made.

If you prefer your merlot on the richer, deeper side, Wolffer Estates' 2003 Estate Selection Merlot ($35) fits the bill. A blend of 88% merlot from Wolffer's oldest merlot vines with 12% cabernet franc, it shows ripe aromas of blackberries, raspberries, spice, earth, leather and even a little tobacco. The palate is rich and lush with similar flavor and a background of minerals. This is a fine example of Roth's Old World style.

Of the new red releases, Wolffer Estates' 2004 Cabernet Franc ($40) is the real star. Though clearly not priced for everyday consumption, the ripe, blackberry-laced, earthy nose is enchanting with hints of cedar and violets in the background. The palate is just as ripe with sweet blueberries, blackberries and leather with subtle notes of toffee, caramel and wet earth. Ripe tannins provide well-integrated structure and a long, dry finish makes this a real stunner.

To learn more about these wines, or to order, visit www.wolffer.com. Roth will also be hosting the annual harvest luncheon on November 17 where attendees can get an exclusive tasting of the 2007 vintage. Tickets are $40. Call 631-537-5106 x17 to reserve your spot.

Wolffer will be celebrating its 25th anniversary in 2008 and Wolffer has "some great wines in the pipeline" to help celebrate. Keep an eye out.

TAKE A HIKE WITH KEN KINDLER

Hike leaders are always thinking about new routes for hikes. It is a creative process, we look at maps, walk trails, and discuss building new ones. At the September Southampton Trails Preservation Society meeting, the members of the Board began brainstorming for new and exciting hikes. The idea that caught my imagination was a hike that ties East Hampton to Southampton.

The Paumanok Path (PP) runs through the two towns, but just inside Southampton, there is almost a mile of road walking. The hike I envisioned was a trek from Cedar Point Park, to the Long Pond Greenbelt. It's an 11 mile hike, so 1 mile of road walking would hardly be noticeable. East Hampton Trails Preservation Society recently started leading one long hike each month, that they call their "Longshanks Hike." I thought this hike would be a great addition to this series. I contacted Richard Lupoletti, Vice President Members' Services. Richard has been helping set up the Longshank hikes for EHTPS, so he readily agreed to walk a preview of the hike with me.

We decided to cut a couple of miles off the hike, to bring it within the reach of more of the members, so for the preview hike, instead of starting from Alewife Brook Landing, we started on Northwest Road by the Van Scoy Cemetery and Schoolhouse Plaque. While we were walking, I told Richard that I like the fact that this hike physically ties the two towns together and that having the new Nature Center at the Schaffner House as our destination will help familiarize hikers with this new facility. "In that case" Richard said, "you want to attract a large number of people to this hike, so you need to make it shorter." He suggested that we cut the hike down to less than 5 miles and start on Wainscott Northwest Road for our walk between towns, to the Nature Center.

We met once again to preview the revised shorter hike. I left my car parked outside the gate to the Shaffner House, on the road shoulder, not blocking the driveway. Richard drove us to Wainscott Northwest Road and explained that the Airport cuts across this road. It changes into Daniel's Hole Road, which is really a separate road you can catch further east on Montauk Highway.

We continued under power lines strung between large towers along a LIPA right-of-way (ROW) and parked on the road shoulder. I had thought that we were going to hike from where the PP crosses further north on this road. Instead, we started from the Switchback Trail. This trail runs north of the power lines, and another trail that runs along the south side of the power lines will get you to the PP. Even though these trails are unmarked, it is easy to follow them to 75 feet of the PP that connects them to the west.

Traveling west on the PP we come to Sagg Road. This is where the road-walk begins. We turned right onto Sagg Road and then after a short distance we turned left onto Widow Gavitts Road. Next we turned right onto the Trustee Road into the Greenbelt. We were walking once again, parallel to, or on the power line ROW. After the PP returns to the ROW and heads up an incline, we saw the entrance to some trails; the second trail to the left is the old railroad spur. Recently, motorized vehicles have created an exceptionally uneven surface to walk on. After walking this for the second time in several days, Richard and I, in desperation, developed an alternate route. We walked back to where the trails intersected the ROW and took the first trail on our left. This is the Sprig Tree Path. If you look to the right, you will see that this trail continues as the PP on the right side of the ROW. We followed the Sprig Tree Path to an intersection, where we turned right onto the Crooked Pond Trail. We walked on this trail a quarter mile to a right turn that takes you up a hill, across the old RR spur, and around some post and rail fencing to where we had parked by the new Nature Center.

Ken Kindler is a Trails and Open Space Advocate working to help the trails groups and land managers care for our "Natural Island." If you would like to learn more about our trails or help care for them, visit the Hiking Long Island website. www.hike-li.org

DAN'S TRAVELS

Go Fish

Last weekend Hurricane Noel, "downgraded" to a nor'easter, brushed the East End with winds up to 50 m.p.h. and some stronger gusts. The Weather Channel sent a crew to Montauk and they broadcast pictures of tremendous waves hitting the rocks. The broadcast also showed many surfcasters successfully catching fish during the storm.

Montauk State Park and Suffolk County parks were closed but ardent anglers still managed to catch fish at Shagwong Point and north of the Montauk Lighthouse. The storm's winds blew bait right onto the beach, and the bluefish and striped bass followed, so it was a real fishing blitz. Susan at Paulie's Tackle Shop in Montauk tells us the bluefish and striped bass blitz on the beaches continued on Sunday and Monday. Harvey Bennett of Amagansett's Tackle Shop says there are still bluefish and stripers in the bays and on the ocean beaches from East Hampton to Montauk.

In case you haven't previously heard or read about it, surfcaster Mike Milano caught a 61.44-pound striped bass on a yellow darter lure off a Montauk beach in the wee hours of October 31. The big fish fought hard for 25 minutes, then wrapped the line around a boulder and Milano had to wrestle the cow striper over the rocks back to shore.

The Montauk Surfcasting Tournament sponsored by Paulie's Tackle Shop in Montauk runs through December 1. The division leaders so far are:

Waders - "Gary the Toad," 32.6-pound striped bass

Wetsuit - Steve Delara, 41.06-pound striped bass

Youth - Xen Angelidis, 23.84-pound striped bass

Ladies - Tina Ozturk, 19.64-pound striped bass

Kids - Ryawn Ward, 7.07-pound bluefish

Linda at Jamesport Bait & Tackle, Mattituck, says loads of bluefish and striped bass are running from Horton Point to the Mattituck inlet, and blackfish are still biting on green crabs. Steve at Wego Fishing Station in Southold reports the wind blew bait onto the beaches and there were bluefish and stripers "as far as the eye could see" along the Sound beaches. Steve also said the night bite with eels for striped bass was still strong off Orient Point and east up to Fisher's Island. Blackfishing has also been good, and Steve has weighed in several in the 9-to-10 pound range.

Ken Morse of Tight Lines Tackle, Sag Harbor, reports Shinnecock inlet has striped bass and bluefish. Ken thinks with all the rain in the last week, the Southampton and East Hampton Town trustees may open the cuts at Mecox and Georgica which will produce some good surf fishing for a few days.

This is the time of year when charter boats and party boats out of Montauk, Shinnecock, Orient Point and Greenport are getting their clients good bluefish, striped bass and blackfish action.

Mike Milano's 61.44 lb striped bass

I used to fish with my father at the "Mudhole" 17 miles south of Manhattan where we would catch bluefin tuna weighing 300 to 600 pounds. Now, bluefin tuna have almost disappeared. Last Sunday's New York Times had an op ed essay titled "A Tuna Meltdown" written by Paul Greenberg, a former fellow of the Kellogg Foundation on Food and Society Policy. He notes the dwindling schools of bluefin tuna which spawn in the Gulf of Mexico and then migrate to feeding grounds south of New York City and Long Island.

In the last 30 years, he reports commercial longline fishing has reduced the bluefin population by 90 percent. Longliners unreel miles of line with thousands of baited hooks in the Gulf and catch everything that swims by. Greenberg says Bill Hogarth, director of the National Marine Fisheries Service, wants to halt commercial fishing of Atlantic bluefin tuna for three to five years until the stock begins to recover.

Another fish I caught as a child in the fall, whitening or "frost fish," are now gone. They would be blown ashore by heavy surf and winds. I would walk along the surf line with a large straw basket and gather up the still-wriggling fish. I believe management on all types of fishing will be necessary to maintain this finite resource.

EMBARRASSED BY FUNGAL TOENAILS?

If you are embarrassed by unsightly fungal toenails at the beach or while swimming at the pool, we can help you! A severe fungal infection is a serious medical condition, requiring treatment. This problem will gradually get worse and will not go away by itself. Fungal Toenails are contagious and should be treated promptly. Dr. Orlandi has treated this condition hundreds and hundreds of times. He practiced in Manhattan (Yorkville) for over 10 years and is now practicing in Long Island (Babylon Village). We have guided hundreds of patients who thought they would never get rid of this problem to obtain dramatic improvements and often normal toenails following treatment of their fungal conditions. We often treat very severe cases with dramatic results. Every patient is different and your healing ability, age and severity of your condition are all factors that may influence your outcome. This is by far the most common problem that I see in my office. If you have this problem call us and we will help you!!

We are located in beautiful Babylon Village directly South of Argyle Lake. We proudly serve Babylon Village and the surrounding areas with a brand new clean modern facility in a picturesque setting in an upscale community. Our facility has a large private parking lot for easy parking.

We Commonly Treat Severe Fungal Infections Of The Toenails.

If you have fungal toenails you should be aware that this problem is contagious and should be treated promptly. I have seen many children infected most likely from their parents. This problem could have been completely avoided by prompt treatment. Also the fungus infection will spread from toenail to toenail. This can develop into a serious problem with severe fungal nails that are thickened, discolored and odiferous causing pain with secondary bacterial infection. Early treatment is important and is much easier to treat. Many patients have come in to ask about laser treatment of their foot problems. I received in-depth comprehensive training in Newport Beach, California on CO2 Lasers and their use in the treatment of common soft tissue problems (warts, fungal & ingrown toe nails) occurring of the foot. The tremendous benefits that laser treatment could offer for your condition are many. As a surgeon my preference is to use the laser when possible. It is an advanced technology that reduces morbidity, usually eliminates hospitalization and provides better patient care. If you are a younger patient and are suffering from unsightly recalcitrant (hard to eliminate) fungal toenails, a minor surgery followed up with an application of antifungal medication directly to the nail bed may be used to help significantly reduce and may also help eliminate persistent fungal infections. Excellent results are commonly seen following treatment of this condition. Healthy clear toenails are a general indicator of good health and there is no more need to be embarrassed by unsightly fungal toenails. Fungal toenails are extremely difficult to eliminate and may require more than one treatment.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

The chill in the air is for real...there aren't any warmer days ahead. The stores are gearing toward fall/winter merchandise that will keep you warm and cozy for the next five months. Holiday items are also on the horizon, let's do some winter and holiday shopping.

Starting out in Hampton Bays this week, I stopped in at Bar Boy Products on West Montauk Highway to see what was going on for the upcoming holiday season. Are you ready for Bar Boy? All new holiday items have arrived, including new kitchen islands by Linon with granite or wood tops that are priced from $159 to $379. There are 30-quart turkey fryer kits priced at $79.90, turkey roasting accessories, slicers, knives (by Russell), new roasting pans that are priced from $20.99 to $65.99 and Forshner knives. Not to mention the display bowls, platters, cutting boards, basters, dinnerware, glassware, flatware and even kitchen sinks. The shelves are full, trust me on that one. Where do you think Ina Garten of the Barefoot Contessa shops? Call 631-728-7100 for more information.

At Accents by J. Tortorella on West Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays, the Christmas Shoppe's unique holiday collection is ready to go...enchancing your home with unique new merchandise. From the incredibly cute to the exquisitely elegant, you can choose from festive and unique gifts and décor for your home. Look for Carolina frazer firs and Canadian balsam firs to put all those gifts under. Fine collectibles are also available including Dept. 56 Villages, Disney Traditions and Jim Shore figurines. All exclusive here now through January 8.

Delicious fall flavors are in season now through Thanksgiving at Hampton Coffee Company located at the BHNH on Mill Road in West Hampton Beach and on Montauk Highway in Water Mill. They are once again featuring hot out-of-the-oven pumpkin muffins, hot apple cider with a cinnamon stick, and their freshly roasted pumpkin pie coffee beans to bring home. And for those chilly autumn days, nothing warms one up better than a bowl of hot, homemade soup. Many selections are low fat and/or vegetarian. Both cafés are open year round from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily. Visit www.hamptoncoffeecompany.com for more details.

The new Spring 2008 Collection of the modern, sophisticated and indulgent handbags by Kaia Peterka have arrived at Saks Fifth Avenue on Hampton Road and Main Street in Southampton (and nationwide). Modern, sophisticated and indulgent, these bags live life beyond the ordinary. The collection has earned a following with elegant and lightweight construction, luxe materials and striking designs. They are made in Chelsea, largely by hand, with brocade linings and fine leathers. A great gift idea for the person who has almost everything!

Suffolk Designer Lighting on County Road 39A in Southampton has it all going on just in time for the holidays. There is a clearance sale in progress with up to 60% off on selected items including chandeliers, floor and table lamps and so much more. Also in the showroom you will find a large selection of accent furniture, framed mirrors, paintings and prints. Don't miss this sale, it's a good one. Shopping hours are Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

You might be looking for East Hampton Picture Framings new home for an amazing selection of beautiful frames...the shop is now located at 374 Montauk Highway in Wainscott, a convenient location for gift giving. Open Thursday through Monday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. I myself have some posters to be framed...I'm there!

Just in time for the holiday parties, Atlantic Skin

& Laser Center located at 518 Montauk Highway, Room 106, in Amagansett has just introduced a new eyelash extension service. Eyelash extensions are the new mascara. They look natural and are completely weightless. The application takes about two hours and costs $350. The lashes last as long as your natural eyelashes last, about a month. Refills are available every two to four weeks. The lashes are durable and most anything can be done without damaging them including showering, swimming, exercising etc. Hollywood celebrities such as Jennifer Lopez, Oprah, Naomi Campbell, Nicole Kidman and others all use eyelash extensions and love them. Open Tuesday-Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. by appointment only. For more information or to make an appointment, call Atlantic Skin & Laser at 631-267-9800.

Hot Off The Press: Shopping For A Cause is a shopping event to benefit the South Fork Breast Health Coalition at BMW of Southampton will be held on Thursday, November 15 from 5 to 9 p.m. Enjoy a 10% discount on all your purchases while an additional 10% of the proceeds go to the SFBHC so that they can continue supporting their programs for breast cancer and patient/survivor support groups. See any of the participating designers for tickets...Theory, Twist, Alice + Olivia, Chanel, Norah's, Brahmin, Positive Energy, Christopher Fisher, Dominique Jewelers, Renaissance. Contact Theory at: (631) 287-5121 for more information.

Until next week. Ciao and happy fall shopping!

If your shop is having a sale, has new inventory or if you are a new business or have relocated, and you want everyone to know about it, please e-mail me at shop-til@danspapers.com and at Newkids@danspapers.com or via fax at (631) 537-6755. I would love to hear all about it!

JUST FOR KIDS

AudraRox Performs Last Kidstreet Show of the Season

This year, Bay Street Theatre has showcased all sorts of talent geared towards kids through their Kidstreet Series. And now, they'll be wrapping up the season with a beloved voice in kids' culture – Audra Tsanos and her rocking kids' band, AudraRox. This Brooklyn-based kids' rock band has traveled all over the place, pleasing audiences of children and adults alike. With six musicians, instruments featured are drums, guitar, keyboard, saxophone, flute, bass and of course, vocals. Most of the musicians are parents themselves, and found their way to Audra through the most important connection of all – their children.

AudraRox bloomed from an idea to a reality "organically." It started out when Audra Tsanos moved to New York City and started a family. Her musical history and theatre background were great foundations, but she didn't want to devote herself to something that would take her away from her two children. So she fostered her love of music in a different way – as a teacher. She started teaching with Music For Aardvarks, a popular music group for kids founded by David Weinstone in 1997.

Weinstone encouraged Audra to run with the program in any way she saw fit, and she found that there was a need for more performance. So, she started performing some of the Music for Aardvarks songs as covers. All the musicians in the band were different people that she had worked with through Music for Aardvarks. After a few changes in band members, she ended up with the current incarnation of the group and they became known as Audra Tsanos and Her All-Star Band Perform Music for Aardvarks. As you may have guessed, it wasn't the easiest name to remember. So, people started referring to the band by her email address – AudraRocks. Since that web site was taken, they chose AudraRox, and the group has become a household name since then.

Major companies like Nickelodeon showed interest in the talented, kid-focused band from the beginning. When Nickelodeon asked the band for a demo, they were yet to record a single original song. But not a group to pass up a great opportunity, they created and recorded six original songs in three weeks and they submitted their demo.

The band's debut CD, I Can Do It By Myself was met with critical acclaim. The six talented musicians addressing issues from a lost shoe to sugar highs, allowing both children and their parents to feel connected to the music. Audra's strong, clear voice brings to the forefront issues that relate to kids and families in a fun, upbeat and positive way.

AudraRox is planning on coming out with a second CD in the coming year, and the working title is You're a Rock Star Too. Audra is still teaching at Music for Aardvarks, and the group does some birthday parties and plays concerts all over the place. They go into schools and play in public theatre venues. Luckily, the group is made up of fun-loving and energetic folks, because it sounds like they have a lot on their plate.

But we are very lucky to have them coming to Bay Street to wrap up another fantastic season of Kidstreet, which brings kid-focused theatre and arts to our community.

And community is one of the things Audra loves most about her band. "I've been teaching twenty-plus classes a week for 8 1/2 years," she said in an interview. "That's thousands of families, and my clients are in film and television, fashion, magazines and newspapers, artists, musicians, doctors, teachers, restaurateurs, shop owners. It's put me in the center of the community. When I first started I knew that the classes were about more than music, they were about community. Everyone coming together at the same time in their life – as new parents – and sitting in the circle."

Tickets for AudraRox at Bay Street Theatre are $12 per person, for adults and kids. Tickets are available by calling the Bay Street Theatre Box Office at 631-725-9500 or can be purchased online at www.baystreet.org.

KidStreet's Founding Sponsor is Suffolk County National Bank. The 2007 KidStreet programming is also funded in part by Brown Harris Stevens Real Estate, Hamptons Country Day Camp and by Suffolk County under the auspices of the Office of Cultural Affairs, Steve Levy, County Executive.

Dan's HOME Guide

The Hostess With The Mostest

In the movies, Thanksgiving is this picturesque "Brady Bunch" affair where loving families indulge in an exquisite meal cooked with no effort whatsoever. In real life, unfortunately, the holiday is generally a mixture of stress, squabbles and everyone's crazy Uncle Phil who drinks too many beers and tells boring stories. However, that perfect family dinner doesn't have to be as out of reach as it seems. Check out these helpful tips to create a stress free holiday for you and a fun-filled day for your guests.

MAKE A PLAN

This Thanksgiving, be so organized your kids suspect you've developed OCD. Start by making a carefully crafted menu, mixing the classics with one or two unique family specialties. Then translate your recipes to a shopping list denoting every item you need to purchase or pull out. Finally, look at prep time, see what you can prepare days in advance and then put together a cooking schedule, keeping in mind that your turkey will take up at least three hours of oven time.

KEEP DECORATIONS SIMPLE

While adorning your home with cornucopias and lifesize pilgrims is certainly an option, you'll be exhausted before you get to the kitchen. Instead, keep it simple and elegant with tasteful floral decorations and hold colored candles. The centerpiece is always a good place to let your creative juices flow, just leave room for the real star of the show...the turkey!

ASIGN ASIGN ASIGN

Every host tends to try to take on everything him or herself, but spreading the wealth will keep your sanity in check and ensure that you don't end up with ten fruitcakes nobody likes. Request that guests bring some of the smaller items on your menu such as desserts, bread or alcohol, and then recruit a sous chef in the family to help you with simple cooking tasks like chopping, washing and peeling.

KEEP THE KITCHEN CLEAR

If you aren't a family of football fans, you're likely to have several guests milling about before dinner, probably ending up in your way. Put a tray of appetizers and wine in the living room giving your guests a place to congregate and ensuring that there aren't "too many cooks in the kitchen."

CLEAN AS YOU GO

Nothing is worse after a long day of cooking and entertaining than tackling a Mount Everest of dishes. Clean up as you go, taking five minutes between each dish to load up the washer and scrub the pans, so that at the end of the meal all that's left to do is clear the plates.

ONE STEP AT A TIME

It's easy to simmer the potatoes while sautéing the green beans and tossing the salad but don't be surprised when you end up with undercooked potatoes, overcooked green beans and a soggy salad. Space out your cooking so that you work on only one dish at a time, ensuring that all your meals get the right amount of salt, pepper and TLC.

CHILD'S PLAY

Kid's tables are a great way to give adults some private time but they are less effective when parents have to rush over every two seconds to control bored children. First make sure only age-appropriate kids are sitting at the smaller table (babies and bitter teenagers are not prime candidates.) Next, put out crayons and line the table with white paper so kids can doodle between courses. Finally, make a turkey shaped centerpiece using fruit, cheese and toothpicks, so that no one is tempted to eat the crayons!

Everyone knows the best part about Thanksgiving dinner is those leftover sandwiches the following day. This year, pick up some extra Tupperware and offer your guests a doggie bag. Everyone will appreciate the gesture (especially those college kids) and you won't be stuck in a turkey coma for the next week.

HAVE FUN

When you're stressed out, your guests will start stressing out, inevitably stressing you out even more. Put on some music to keep you company while you cook, take five minute breaks here and there to mingle over a glass of wine, and remember the day is about having fun. The number one key to being a great host is "hosting" and not just cooking, so make sure you set a plate for yourself at the meal and enjoy every bit of your hard work.

Dan's HOME Guide

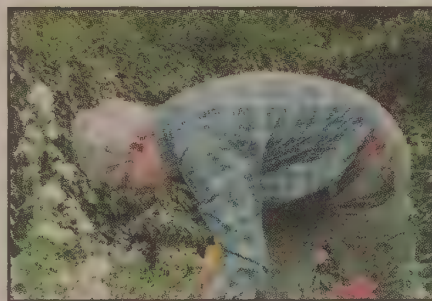

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

When an older, good friend was recently run down by a bicyclist, leaving her with a brain injury and little awareness of her surroundings, I was reminded of the fragility of life and the importance of extracting from it each and every moment we have. For me, gardening has been one of the ways I live life to the fullest.

Since I had the "bug" for gardening early on, I have had the chance to try many types. I found that vegetable gardening was not for me – providing forage for rabbits, squirrels and deer was not my interest. Flower gardening works much better, and I find a sense of fulfillment from it that is unparalleled. I have tried most local and marginal plants that grow in an East End garden. At this point, I focus on garden plants that perform well in the local soil and climate, and also those plants that now fit with my complex, international schedule.

Gardening at its least is as good as meditation. It also provides a depth and link to life that is rewarding. Over the years, I have learned from gardening. It has served as a baseline against which I live. Some of the more important learning includes the following:

It is important to cultivate soil to a good depth if you want successful flowers. Everything grows better in loose, worked soil. As with garden soil, every now and then it is important to till the soil of mind, body and spirit. Just as in a garden, where the soil has been compacted over time, people can become hardened to the point where nutrients cannot seep in. It is important to dig deep in life and cultivate oneself. The results will always be that things grow and bloom better.

A strategic garden design is both important and practical. It is never fun to plant a flower in the wrong spot, or to discover how hard it is to maintain a plant until after it is planted. Gardening has taught me that it is really important to plan ahead on how things need to be maintained. Life, too, is better when you plan ahead and think strategically.

Be careful about the advice from others. While many people claim to be gardening experts – few are! I recently read an article by a "gardening expert" that said deer do not eat hostas sprayed with Lifebuoy soap and water. Not true. In fact, when animals are hungry, the life force drives them to eat anything to survive. In gardening and life, having the right barriers in place in anticipation of disaster can turn disaster to success.

Keep weeds under control, or they take over everything. Just as negative thoughts mature quickly, getting control of them as soon as they sprout keeps the garden, and the mind, in good shape.

It can take years of experimentation to create a good garden. Life is about experimentation and discovering what works, just like in gardening. Learning from successes and failures is not to be avoided, but used as a way of perfecting possibilities.

Water is the most important ingredient in life. Everything needs water to survive. Some plants wilt quickly, while others can stand some drought. Sometimes, by the time you find out a plant is dehydrated it's too late. The body needs water as well. Most of us don't realize it until we're thirsty, which most physicians agree is usually at our dehydration point. Give yourself and the garden a good watering every day.

Treat each plant the way it wants to be treated. Each plant has its special requirements. While you can treat every plant the same and have an average garden, addressing the individual needs of plants and people, creates a fabulous versus adequate garden and life.

Ask for help when needed. Plants and people need support now and then. The heavier the load, the more support needed. Tomato plants fall over from the weight and leave their fruits to rot on the ground. The same is true for people.

Gardens are best when clean and organized. Ancient people believed the garden was a reflection of the soul. Quakers believe the garden is a reflection of the mind. Both are important to keep in alignment.

The best part, of course, is to reflect on the world around, and to savor the fruits of our labors. In both life and gardening, a little effort can go a long way!

Elegant Settings

Thanksgiving is just another wonderful excuse to bring out our best china and silverware and decorate our dining rooms one last time in the glorious fall shades of color. The table is the center of the hub and the place that will be seen and seated at the longest. Attempting to put everything we own that says Thanksgiving on that one table will only serve to make a distraction rather than a thing of beauty. Be smart and have other surfaces nearby that you can decorate as well, such as a server or buffet table.

Having your china, napkins and silverware all ready is a must. Start doing this several days before, so that once you have your table decorated, you can work on your place settings. Secure your color scheme first. Will you do the oranges, greens and gold of fall or swerve a bit to other colors? An all silver or white table setting is elegant yet "in the background" for your other colors.

Overloading the table with pumpkins, leaves and gourds will only have to be removed at dinner time to make way for the rounds of vegetables, meat, stuffing's and potatoes. So why not try to keep the decorating to a minimum, let it spill on to the other surfaces and let your table settings shine!

Having your dishes and glassware sparkling, you can begin to set the table turning the dishes upside down, stemware as well, till Thanksgiving day. Then you can flip them over. This done in advance, gives you plenty of time to rearrange things as go along. If you have an extra pedestal cake plate, you can start by using that for height with your decorations in the center and work out from there.

Arrange some pumpkins and gourds with fall leaves spilling down on the table. Find some glittered beaded fruits at Michael's and slip a napkin on the plate with the fruit on top. A little slice in the fruit can serve as a holder for a place card at each setting. Having a sit down dinner or a buffet should be well decided in advance.

A topiary plant or two, or even three if you have a large table surface, gives height as well as room for many other pieces on the table. As autumn turns into winter, full-service nurseries, home and garden centers and even grocery stores stock all sizes healthy potted ivy plants ideal for indoor growing and decorating. Cover the pots temporarily with material to match your table cloths and napkins or pieces of colored foil to catch the light. Place little candles between them for added interest. Tiny battery operated flickering votive candles will keep the table safe. Grouped together in a cluster or spread out, either way, makes the table much warmer and festive.

Flowers, namely mums, spell out Thanksgiving as well. Instead of having large arrangements, try putting several little bouquets, nestled in pretty little vases or stemware, around the table. If you are going to have a busy tablecloth and napkin pattern, keeping your china and other settings simple will work best. By the time you put on your decorations, things will be getting quite busy. By letting the background work for you, by staying quiet, you can go a bit over the top with your dishes and centerpieces.

Have your ideas well planned in advance, take them and go shopping as soon as possible. The sooner you get your table scheme done, the quicker you can get on to the cooking!

Happy Thanksgiving!

Setting The Stage For The Thanksgiving Table

With Thanksgiving only a few weeks away, we are all gearing toward the biggest travel and family and friend get-together day of the entire year. Bigger than the Fourth of July, this holiday brings together families and friends to sit down and break bread together, giving thanks for the meal that sits before them. Whether you're having guests for a big celebration or spending a quiet time of gratitude with your family, you'll enjoy the holiday more if you do some preparations ahead of time. Not only will Thanksgiving go smoothly, but you'll have a great start on Christmas, too. Between cooking and cleaning, setting the stage for celebrations can be an overwhelming task.

When a large number of guests will be attending a get-together, it is appropriate to have a serving area and a dining area. This way, large platters will not get in the way of plates, goblets and silverware. Trigger your family's senses with visual and aromatic pleasures. Autumn decorations and scents are key to setting the mood for a hardy

Thanksgiving get-together. The decorations for each area or table can be similar and thematic or completely different and unique – the choice is yours.

The cooking scents alone will provide an aroma pleasing to any guest. If you want to start early, consider some dry or liquid potpourri in a small crock-pot to slowly fill the air with holiday fragrance. Candles are the obvious choice for bringing warmth to your Thanksgiving festivities.

Candles supply beauty, a delicate scent, and an overall "homey" feeling. There are some seasonal candles available specifically for autumn and Thanksgiving holidays available at most local shops. Select a variety of sizes and shapes to add contrast. Tea candles work well when displayed in glasses and are also a little more budget friendly. Also, you can fill a hurricane candleholder with brightly colored fall leaves and pine cones to make it look more traditional. Fresh cranberries also make a beautiful addition to the table. Use a serving platter or decorative plate and place a large, pillar candle in the center. Spread cranberries around the base of the candle and instantly you have a centerpiece.

Pumpkins also make great Thanksgiving decorations. Decorate with pumpkins of all sizes by adding them to your porch or indoor displays. Just before your Thanksgiving dinner use them to create homemade pumpkin soup or pie. Some traditional centerpieces that can be placed on a Thanksgiving table are a cornucopia, Indian corn or an autumn colored candle decorated with autumn leaves. The most popular centerpiece choice is a fresh fruit basket – with good reason. This will serve two purposes. The splendor of the basket itself brings natural beauty and color to your table, and the fruit makes a nutritional snack that will complement any meal. That is why they make such a popular gift. If a fruit basket isn't your choice, display a bouquet or basket of fresh flowers on your table to complement your tablecloth and add color. Silk flowers are gorgeous and can be used year after year. Acorns from trees, leaves and vines will all provide some great ideas for wreaths and decorating your house for fall. Weave some garlands or check out your local craft and hobby store for some wicker baskets and make your own colorful centerpiece. Add some miniature pumpkins, squash and Indian corn that are often sold in supermarkets, craft shops and farmer's markets this time of year.

Thanksgiving salt and peppershakers along with serving bowls and platters always add a holiday touch to the serving table, while also being thematic. There are many shapes and styles of salt and pepper shakers, gravy boats, serving pieces, sugar bowls and creamers to choose from, including turkeys, pilgrims, Indians, you get the idea!

If you are expecting a large crowd for the holiday dinner and don't have a dinnerware service for twenty-four, just mix and match with what you have, giving the Thanksgiving table a shabby chic look. Ditto with the wine and water glasses. Or, visit an affordable local home-goods shop; you can buy a box of stems and water glasses at a reasonable price. Just store them for the next holiday dinner. Purchase colorful disposable containers for the leftovers and doggie bags. Your guests will appreciate the quick lunch the next day.

These easy Thanksgiving decorating ideas and tips will help you provide a festive environment for an autumn holiday you will always remember.

To Cruise or Not To Cruise?

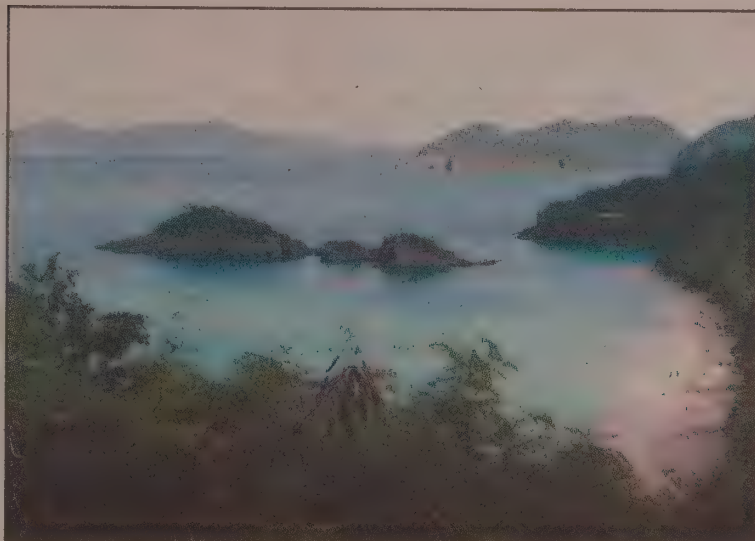

You've heard it all before. Some relative or coworker raving about their latest cruise. They discuss how great the food was or how nice the ship was. Blah, blah, blah. You've heard the hype, but can it be believed? A simple weighing of the pros and cons should suffice for most and if you're one of the wonderers, read on for an unbiased rundown of the why and why not.

The Pros

I must start off by admitting that I am personally a big fan of cruising. I realize that this admission may elicit the scorn of hard-core travel junkies, but the biggest plus in my book – as well as my checkbook – can be summed up in one glorious word: value.

To me, the biggest advantage cruising offers is the opportunity to "sample" various ports of call for one low price. Don't believe me? Go ahead and price out what it would cost to fly between a handful of destinations on even the simplest itinerary. Add to that your hotel costs and the price of gourmet meals and the difference on the bottom line is quite noticeable.

The next item on the "pro" list is in actuality a cumulative one. I say this because the cruise experience as a whole is often what prompts such post-cruise gushing on the return home. Practically speaking, what's to dislike about lazing in the sun, gorging oneself night and day, then dancing the night away? Mind you, these are just some of the more basic experiences to be had, and with the entrance of bigger and bolder ships offering everything from rock-climbing to ice skating, one doesn't even have to leave the ship to have their plate full – both literally and figuratively.

The Cons

What fault could possibly be found with the scenario listed above? Oddly enough, it is the strengths of cruising that at times are also its weaknesses. For example, while cruising serves up a sampler platter of several destinations, the time spent at each one is by no means enough to take in all that each port has to offer. In certain cases, logistics preclude visiting distant sites or time-consuming activities. This is not to say that great times cannot be had. It's just that in many cases, due to necessary time constraints, only the surface can be scratched of a given destination's wealth of attractions.

The only other real gripe against cruising is the privacy factor, or lack thereof. Other than in your cabin or on some secret beach you will be surrounded by people – many of whom are seeking out the same experiences that you are. In port, the less-adventurous crowd the tourist traps and the more popular excursions may at times be better described as cattle drives. Of course, this can be remedied with a little foresight and the direction of a knowledgeable travel agent. Still, it is hard to shake the feeling of "prepackaged experiences" to be found at the heaviest ports of call.

The Verdict

To cruise or not to cruise, that is the question, and it is one that each must answer for themselves. My advice is to contact your travel agent for help in evaluating what aspects of a vacation appeal to you, and to what extent you foresee those hopes being fulfilled within your comfort level, both on or off a ship. So while the reason whether or not you'll spend your vacation on terra firma or on the briny ultimately depends on you. If you want my opinion, you're always free to ask. When I'm not at the agency, you can find me on the pool deck.

Rock On!

It's rare for an artist to equally blend skill and experience with creativity and passion in their work. But such is the case with master stonemason Michael Jamieson, sculptor by trade and owner of Jamieson Stoneworks, LLC, who creates art from stone by hand cutting and carving each piece. Whether it is a sculpture, fireplace, veneer, patio, monument or pier, each project stands out. "I love stone. I love the history of it. I love creating from it. I get a great joy from doing it," he said.

Far from the average stonemason, Jamieson's background as a sculptor gives him an artsy edge, as he views each job as "a newborn with the greatest potential of being something unique and great." He noted that most stonemasons today are landscapers who went into the stone business of simply building walls, but that he hand cuts his stone and works with the grain of stone and giant boulders, cutting them into building blocks.

Jamieson's career as a stonemason began after a company he hired to dig the foundation on land he purchased in Rockland County (no pun intended) hit solid rock. He bought a rock splitter and learned to cut the rock himself and compared the experience to cutting diamonds, finding the grain and faults, using a plug and feather. "I started splitting the stone, and with the rocks I built stone walls," he recalled. "As they say, if you build it they will come, and they did. People saw the walls and hired me to do theirs." Jamieson went on to study with skilled masons and artists, and is now a member of a national stonemason organization that meets periodically to learn and discuss what is going on in the stone world. "I just returned from Mallorca, Spain where I went to learn the latest techniques in my business," he said.

Jamieson considers the projects that he donates the most prominent – including a 9/11 memorial that he carved from an 11-ton granite glacial erratic that was around 1.2 billion years old (the boulder was tested by a geologist). "A friend of mine lost his brother who was a firefighter on 9/11 and asked me to carve a rock for a memorial in Rockland County," he explained. "I like carving boulders because you can already see what's going to happen, and you don't have to carve the entire stone because nature has already done a lot of the work." The 9/11 memorial has an eagle carved on the side, a waving American flag on the front and a plaque with the names of loved ones who lost their lives that day.

Jamieson draws inspiration for his work from nature, mixing the old with the new. "I am always looking at great stonework by masons who have come before me," he said, noting that some of the best stonemasons from the western hemisphere have cut and carved great works of art in buildings right here in New York City. His favorite stone to work with is granite, as it is the most primal of all stones and was the first to come up from the center of Earth. "Once you hit the hard stuff it is difficult to go back," he said. "That's how Noguchi must have felt."

Jamieson's personal stone collection includes pieces dating back to the revolution, but the majority consists of carved architectural pieces from the mid-to-late 19th century, which was the heyday of stonework. "Like my wife can never have enough shoes, I can never have enough stone," he justified.

In the future, Jamieson plans to build a home on the East End from stone, of course, and assures that he can offer a level of stonemasonry that few other masons can accomplish. Give him a call, not just for stonework, but to create a unique work of art for your home or business.

Jamieson Stoneworks, LLC has an extensive portfolio and will do an estimate anywhere. Visit www.jamiesonstoneworks.com or call 845-753-6212 for more information.

Oh Dear, Oh Deer!

Nothing is more frustrating for gardeners than to see their hard work and money gobbled up by freeloading deer. I lost everything in my garden to these cute creatures. A little planning and understanding can help to reduce losses. Deer are browsing animals that often follow regular paths and eat as they are underway. They will test most plants but have preferences for certain varieties, which they can quickly destroy. More than five million mule deer and twenty million white-tailed deer roam a continually shrinking habitat in North America.

Just how much your ornamentals are bothered by deer depends on many factors – the number of deer in your area, prolonged periods of heavy snow cover in winter, a summer drought or the loss of nearby browsing areas. These and other factors combine to limit the availability of wild plants. However, there are several things you can do to prevent your prized plantings from being eaten by deer. Try deterring the deer either by hanging bars of soap (Irish Spring) or bags of hair around your yard – the smell is thought to keep deer away. Unfortunately, such deterrents are often limited in their effectiveness. Hunger may drive a deer to endure an unpleasant smell.

Deer also have a very acute sense of smell to warn them of danger. If this sense is impaired by other smells, they become nervous and will leave the area. There are several commercial repellent sprays available for deterring deer, but they do not afford 100% protection. To make the sprays as effective as possible, reapply them after every rainfall.

By far the most effective way to protect your plantings from deer is with a fence. Deer are high jumpers, so to be effective the fence should be at least eight feet tall. The cost of such a fence is no small consideration. Some municipalities have ordinances restricting the height of fences, and a few areas even ban fencing altogether. As for me, I like to invite wildlife in, not fence it out.

So what do you do? The best alternative is to learn to live with deer by planting your garden with them in mind.

White-tailed deer are known to eat more than 600 types of plants and mule deer eat at least 780. Some of their favorite foods are yew, hemlock, willow, arrow-wood, bearberry, red cedar, spindle tree, Japanese holly, American arborvitae, evergreen azaleas, phlox, crocus, hosta, tulips and violets. By avoiding these (what's left?) and other susceptible plants, you can minimize the amount of damage deer do to your landscape.

Try growing more native plants, many of which will readily grow in poorer soils. Don't count on the thorns or spines of plants to protect them. Deer often eat thorny plants such as roses, firethorn and Russian olive. No plant can be considered completely deer-proof. A ravenous deer will eat just about anything, including the somewhat toxic foliage of mountain laurel. They may also, for whatever reason, start feeding on plants that in previous years had gone untouched. True, they recently started eating my holly and forsythia.

There are certain types of plants that deer normally won't touch such as toxic and medicinal plants, as well as those with sticky or hairy leaves and stems. They also dislike plants with fragrant foliage, especially those that smell lemony or minty. Some plant families also seem to be more deer-resistant than others. Many of the plants in the mint daisy, poppy, buttercup, snapdragon and barberry families often go untouched by deer.

Deer are creatures of habit, returning to the same area to feed day after day. Since it's hard for deer to break this habit once it's been established, it may take them a while to realize that any new deer-resistant plants in your yard are not on their menu. You don't have to eliminate a plant just because deer enjoy it. Quite often, a plant that was browsed during the winter will recover. Just like any pruning you might do, winter browsing promotes vigorous new spring growth, which continues on into summer.

If all else fails, consider investing in a deer fence. It should be professionally installed, but a homeowner can also make it a do-it-yourself project. Just make sure you are covered from head to toe when you go into the woods to erect the fencing. Deer carry ticks, and they are just waiting for a host to hop on. But that's another article.

Whether you choose to landscape your yard with plants that withstand being browsed, or opt for those that tend to be shunned, you can learn to live with deer. I have, they have eaten everything and there is nothing left!

YOUR WEEKLY GUIDE TO FUN IN THE HAMPTONS

Julie Andrews and Emma Walton Present Simeon's Gift

After years spent collaborating on seventeen children's books, Julie Andrews and daughter Emma Walton will be seeing one of them come to life on the stage over Thanksgiving weekend.

Their "blindingly gorgeous" (Kirkus Reviews) picture book entitled Simeon's Gift, will be performed at Bay Street Theatre from November 23-25 for audiences to enjoy over the holidays. This will be the world premiere of this new, hour-long musical, which is adapted from the book.

"It is thrilling for Emma and I to see Simeon's Gift come to life on stage with such beautiful music and lyrics," said Andrews, who will be publishing her autobiography, Home: A Memoir of My Early Years, next April. "I cannot think of a better place for it to receive its world premiere than Bay Street Theatre."

Walton explained that she and her famous singer/actress mother actually wrote the first version of this children's book when Walton was about five years old. She then took it to her father, set designer Tony Walton, to illustrate, and her parents, who were divorced, then decided to have it bound and given to her as a keepsake gift.

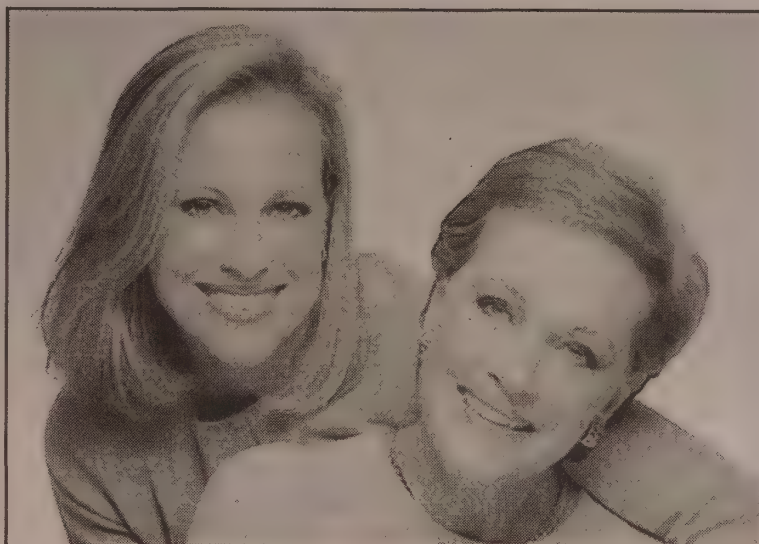

Over the years, Tony Walton also illustrated 12 books in the children's book series entitled Dumpy the Dump Truck, also written by Andrews and Walton.

"It was many years later that my mother and I decided to write children's books together," said Walton. "We decided to take our original Simeon's Gift book and flush it out a bit, and the original story is actually the last third of the stage show."

Their children's book San Simeon's Gift was published in 2000 by Harper Collins, and was illustrated by award-winning Russian illustrator/painter Gennady Spirin. "We'll be showing his work at Bay Street Theatre over Thanksgiving Weekend," said Walton. The new book by this well-known mother daughter team is an original fable about a minstrel who is in love with a noble woman in medieval times. In order to be worthy of her hand in marriage, he decides to go out and learn more about himself and his craft, so he can create original music rather than playing other people's music. He goes on a journey of self-discovery, learning about the creative process of music. He learns from everyone he encounters – from soldiers he learns rhythms and from monks he learns harmony. Soon he gets overwhelmed in the world, and on his way home, alone in the grace of nature, he experiences a series of wondrous events that lead him to discover his gift.

"This book and musical are about the creative process, it is also a love story, it is about giving, about music, self-discovery and coming of age," explained Walton. She said Bay Street Theatre is launching a new family theatre initiative where they plan to continue developing family audience productions based on children's literature, with the goal of sending them on tour to school districts around the country.

Walton said her mother has been writing children's books for 35 years, which are listed on her website www.julieandrewscollection.com.

"Together we've written 17 children's books, and she's also written four more on her own," said Walton. "This is the first time we've ever adapted any of them to the stage, and we both wrote the script."

Walton said collaborating with her mother "has given our relationship an opportunity to focus on creative play together, as opposed to, 'How was your arthritis this week?' It's been a happy and fun experience, and we also work together online, through webcam technology, seeing each other while working, since she's often on the west coast," explained Walton. "We are both passionate about reading, literacy and the arts, but most of all, about children. And we had the opportunity to put all those together in Simeon's Gift."

Directing and choreographing this show is Marcia Milgrom Dodge, whose other Bay Street credits include The Who's Tommy, Hair, Once on This Island and The West End Horror, which she also co-wrote with her husband Tony.

Musical Director Ian Fraser had worked as a musical director with Andrews on Broadway with Victor/Victoria, and worked in 1972 as her Vocal Arranger for her ABC-TV variety series. For the 1970 musical film Scrooge, he received an Academy Award nomination. His other credits include musical direction for Stop the World I Want to Get Off, Pickwick and Doctor Doolittle among others.

Also working with the music in this show is John Bucchino, whose songs have been performed and recorded by some of the world's great artists and have won numerous honors. Among his CDs are Grateful, The Songs of John Bucchino, It's Only Life and On Richard Rodgers' Piano. He also wrote the songs for a new musical A Catered Affair, which will come to Broadway in the Spring of 2008. A children's book, Grateful, A Song of Giving Thanks, was published by Harper Collins as part of their Julie Andrews Collection.

The cast consists of an ensemble of professional NYC actors. There will also be a recorded narration of the Simeon's Gift story by Andrews. The show runs from November 23-25, and on November 27 and 28 the show will be performed to children from local school districts.

Tickets for Simeon's Gift are now on sale at Bay Street Theatre, and this show is recommended for children seven and above. To reserve tickets, call (631) 725-9500 or buy them online at www.baystreet.org

review: the overwhelming...by gordin & christiano

The American premiere of J. T. Rogers' new play The Overwhelming, grippingly directed by Max Stafford-Clark for The Roundabout Theater Company is a thought provoking tale of an American family, newly arrived in 1994 Rwanda, where a genocidal civil war is about to break out and nothing or anyone is exactly what they seem. The family will find themselves embroiled in grim events beyond their understanding as they struggle to find the truth and ultimately discover what they will do to protect themselves.

The play takes us right to the heart of things, the capital city of Kigali, as tribal hostilities between the Hutu and Tutsi are about to boil over, just as Jack Exley (Sam Robards) an American professor arrives in hopes of interviewing his old roommate Dr. Joseph Gasana (Ron Cephas Jones), believing the respected physician, who heads a pediatric clinic for HIV patients, will be the through line for a new book he is writing that will win him tenure at his college. The utterly naïve professor brings along his African/American wife (Linda Powell), herself a writer, and his teenage son (Michael Stahl-David) by his first wife. They will arrive in this Third World country with their domestic difficulties in tow and each will encounter dilemmas of their own before finally unearthing some troubling truths about the nation and themselves. When they discover Dr. Gasana has gone missing, the tension will escalate and we will be introduced to numerous unsavory characters as the unfolding story brings dangerous friendships to each family member.

The melodramatic story is told in a series of short pointed scenes and the impeccable direction by Max Stafford-Clark moves the action with swift speed, effectively juggling the many themes and plots into a rapidly paced thriller that comes to a jolting conclusion. He has obtained powerful, memorable performances from a uniformly excellent cast, but Ron Cephas Jones as the AIDS doctor is an impassioned standout.

The play first produced at London's National Theatre deals with issues about apathy, survival, self involvement, ignorance and the brutality of civil war while mixing in subplots about interracial families, rebellion, AIDS and more. There is enough material for a dozen plays and while the evening does have many effective moments the emotional impact is diluted by the abundance of information being hurled at us, negating our personal involvement despite the strong performances. The well intended play is so handsomely presented and played that the spellbinding story demands our attention as a flawed, yet unforgettable theatrical achievement.

The Overwhelming opened at the Laura Pels Theatre, 111 West 46th Street. Tickets are available by calling Roundabout Ticket Services at (212) 719-1300, online at www.roundabouttheatre.org or at the theater box office.

SPEAKERS

Poets Dan Moran and Graham Everett present the work of Dan Murray on Saturday, 6 p.m., at Canio's Books, Sag Harbor. On Sunday at Canio's, poets Adam Penna and Annabelle Mosley will read at 3 p.m. The Parrish Art Museum's chief curator Alicia Longwell will speak with currently exhibited artist Almond Zigmund on Saturday, 5 p.m. ($5 museum members, $10 non-members; please call 631-283-2118 for reservations). Novelist Simon Van Booy and poet Lucas Hunt read in the "Writers Speak" series at Stony Brook Southampton next Wed., 7 p.m., in Duke Lecture Hall.

SPECIAL EVENT

On Sunday, November 11, the North Sea estate Port of Missing Men will be opened for a tour, tea and jazz concert with pianist Judy Carmichael as a benefit for the Southampton Historical Society. The house was built 1926-29 as a hunting lodge for Millicent Rogers, daughter of Col. H.H. Rogers Jr. (whose Southampton village mansion is the Historical Society's museum) and her husband, Austrian count Ludwig von Salm-Hoogstraten. Their son Peter Salm and wife Countess Salm are opening the home beyond Conscience Point for this event from 4 to 7 p.m. Tickets are $250; call the Southampton Historical Society at (631) 283-2494.

Entertainment In Town

They Made The Movie Here Film Festival

There are few better ways to spend a rainy day than by going to see a movie. Last Saturday, with the rain in full force, I headed to the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center to check out the free Dan's Papers They Made the Movie Here Film Festival, which presents films that either take place on Long Island or were filmed on the East End. We have many film festivals on the East End — The Hamptons International Film Festival, The Latin American Film Festival and The African American Film Festival, to name a few — but none have the same local flair as this one. And did I mention it's free?

First, if you've never been to WHBPAC, I highly recommend going to see a movie, concert or any of the other many entertainment choices they offer. The historic theater is deftly charming, seats just over 400 guests including a balcony section, and by any measure is one of the most authentic venues on the East End. From the refurbished marquee to the chandeliers and the fine wood detail that adorns the lobby walls, WHBPAC exudes elegance while maintaining a small-town feeling.

This week, the film featured at the Dan's Papers They Made the Movie Here Film Festival was A Shock to the System, a dark comedy starring Michael Caine that includes scenes that were filmed in Long Beach. Our host, Sarah Halsey, introduced the film and then, along with about fifty other guests who also ventured out in the rain, I sat back in the intimate theater to enjoy the flick.

When the movie ended, Sarah invited the audience to a reception held in the bar and lounge area where hors d'oeuvres and white wine were served. The reception casually turned into a discussion of the movie, as many questions were left unanswered. "Do you think Stella told Lieutenant Laker about the evidence she found?" asked one woman. "No way, she was too loyal to Graham," responded another woman. "Do you think Graham will kill again?" asked a gentleman. And so the discussion continued, sort of like a book club but far less organized, as people shared their opinions and thoughts.

One of the women, Dorothy Flynn of Quogue, attended the film festival for the first time last spring and has been a regular ever since. "It's a great thing," she said. "I love how each film is associated with Long Island." Her husband Joe agreed. "It's so nice, and you can't beat the price," he said.

Margaret Holland of Hampton Bays, who often attends the film festival with a group of friends, said,

"We come see the movie, then have lunch in town." Her friend Anna Matz, also from Hampton Bays, added, "We really look forward to it."

The Dan's Papers They Made the Movie Here Film Festival will run for three more weeks at WHBPAC. On Saturday, November 10 at 3 p.m. the 2002 film City by the Sea will be shown, which stars Robert DeNiro and also features scenes from Long Beach, NY. On Saturday, November 17 the film festival will present The Dain Curse, the 1978 mystery movie that was filmed on Shelter Island. The last film of the series, the 1988 comedy Married to the Mob starring East Hampton's Alec Baldwin and Michelle Pfeiffer, will be shown on Saturday, December 1 at 3 p.m. and was shot in several Long Island towns including East Meadow and Massapequa.

Whether it's a rainy day or you're just looking for something to do, They Made the Movie Here is a great way to spend a Saturday afternoon. So come down with family, friends or by yourself and enjoy a free movie at one of the most beautiful venues on Long Island — you can't go wrong.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood in The Hamptons

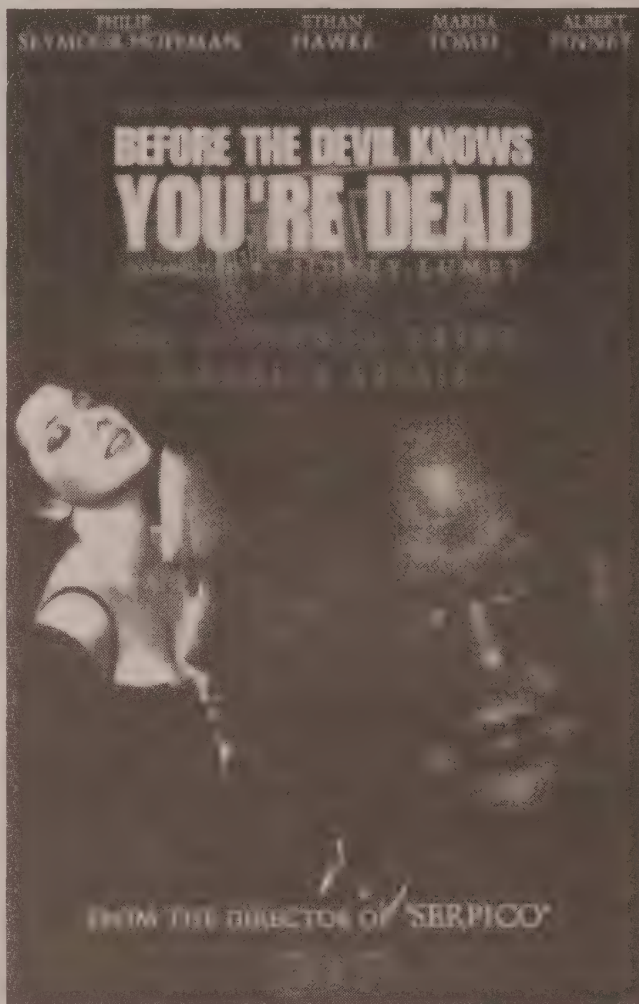

Way back in East Hampton's good ol' golden days, I could bike all over the place (there were no BMWs and my legs had legs). I'd really like to skim past Egypt Lane because it sounded so exotic for this rural I'll place all they had in common was sand. Then hot dog! I learned that Sidney Lumet had a house there. I had worked with him on the NBC production "Sacco and Vanzetti." These many, many years later, it's a kick to find that his director's legs are still terrifically muscular.

The latest classic Lumet pulse-quickener, Before The Devil Knows You're Dead is up there with many of this year's best films. He inspires a fine cast to extravagant heights in a story of impending family tragedy. As brothers, Philip Seymour Hoffman and Ethan Hawke stretch to extreme emotions, desperately attempting but botching a jewelry store heist. Lumet's direction is dizzyingly effective especially in the robbery scenes. Energy, the hallmark of his work, persists today and includes somewhat different elements like sex (Marisa Tomei is Hoffman's wife) and bloody murder).

I guess it is fifty years since Lumet's first feature film 12 Angry Men, and now at age 83 he is digging deeper into what makes his characters tick as loudly as a nuclear charged time bomb. He's known as the epitome of New York directors but there are his films like A Long Days Journey Into Night. His interpretation of Eugene O'Neill's turn-of-the-century, agonized family is not New York but it certainly is Lumet. We see a reflection of this in Before The Devil Knows You're Dead. He's back on his more familiar turf, New York City, and his unrelenting study of this family's disintegration is as powerfully shattering as his 1970s explosive trend-setting classics such as Dog Day Afternoon and Network. Current films like Michael Clayton and American Gangster stand knee deep in homage to Lumet's conscientious grit. Other directors, who gambled in the same dark alleys as Lumet's, brightened their fatalism with lurid tints of signature stylistics whereas Lumet cast bilious green fumes of deadly fluorescent gasses onto the decaying strife of moral corruption and unraveled honor. It ain't poetic.

Like Greek tragedy, Before You're Dead is a family affair. The perpetrators and the victims are almost all Hanson family members. Andy Hanson, another incredible performance by Hoffman, devis-

Before The Devil Knows You're Dead

es the plan to hold up his own parent's jewelry store. He and his brother Hank, wonderfully strung-out by Ethan Hawke, are up to their necks in debt thanks to drugs and stumbling manhood. Andy's scheme is "victimless" he convinces his baby brother. They will pull down 60 grand each and the insurance companies will recompense their parents. Foolproof! It might have been, but not for these fools. It goes wrong on such a grandiose scale it sets a new standard for ineptitude. The opening scenes foreshadow the incubation of the bloody misfortunes. Hank is in a hotel room, gazing at a mirror, watching his own pasty, pudgy-plump body having sex with Gina his wife, Ms. Tomei. The audience's own flesh recoils at the bizarre mismatching of the couple but as they talk later the squirmish visual gives way to a heated atmosphere of mysterious greed mixed with fearful expectation. As yet, there isn't a hint that Gina has been having sex with Andy's pathetically inept brother Hank. Quick cut to "The Day of the Robbery," a peaceful Saturday morning in a suburban shopping center explodes with gun shots. Glass shatters and a getaway car screeches away. Mr. Lumet replays the scenes several times, as he does others. We will be learning more and more, gathering our own assumptions and implications.

How grotesque a result could not have been planned. In the store, a saleslady, Nanette Hanson (Rosemary Harris) is sprawled and bleeding on the floor. She is Andy and Hank's mother. There too is their father Charles (Albert Finney). Outside, on the sidewalk is the dead body of Bobby Lasorda (Brian F. Byrne). He was a punk crook chosen by Hank to handle the dirty end of the stick. As it turned out, there wasn't anything clean left of anything! This film borders on nihilism. Rife with thieves, liars and killers, it twitches with harsh dismissiveness. But, it does not cop out on humanity. Within the borders of the screen, the claustrophobic world of the Hansons bleeds out upon the side curtains travels up to the roof and seeps down off the ceiling. The film doesn't attempt to draw you in; it deliberately repels you. However, as written by Kelly Masterson and directed by Mr. Lumet, Before The Devil rains down on the audience a simple tale of middle class ordinariness written in extra-bold letters. Over-drawn, over-played, over-acted and overwhelmed with the genius of everything done superbly.

Just as scenes are repeatedly replayed to add other viewpoints, you will have a devil of a time keeping it from replaying in your mind for days.

THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL 2007

CITY BY THE SEA

The Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Main Street hosts the long running Dan's Papers free film festival of "Movies Made Here" on Saturday, November 10 at 3 p.m. This festival acknowledges Long Island's active place in filmmaking. Long Beach is the location for this presentation. It stars Robert De Niro, a Long Island guy whose dad was a fine, fine artist with a studio in Montauk. This powerful film was released in 2002 and it is an auspicious production. Admission is free and refreshments are served with a lively discussion. I am your distant host, Guy de Fraumeni, however, Sarah Halsey looks forward to seeing you face to face and, mano a mano.

City By The Sea. Heaven and Hell. The distance between the two is shorter than we think. For sentimental saps like me, the natural East End is Heaven. It is as heavenly as an overfull, equipped recreation room, replete with every consoling device, including an air purifier that blows the cobwebs from our lungs, head and mind. Not far away is Manhattan's West End, Hell's Kitchen. It cooks to the boiling point. As depicted in the current film, City By The Sea, the town of Long Beach, here on Long Island, like ours, was a seaside recreation area but it quickly slid into an ocean of misery. If the broiling West Side is Hell's Kitchen, then this movie would have you shocked to know that Long Beach became Hell's Toilet – a befouled receptacle for the excrement of hopelessness.

City By The Sea stars the best inner acting of Robert De Niro as an NYPD detective who left Long Beach years ago, abandoning his wife, Patti Lupone, and very young son. De Niro's cop is going to pot, living in detachment in downtown, pre-9-11, NY except for on and off romancing of his neighbor, Frances McDormand. Director Michael Caton-Jones is as relaxed as De Niro's stomach muscles with the film's start. However, everyone's abs tighten up when his now grown son, a junkie in great performance by James Franco, is wanted for murder (in self defense he stabbed a crack dealer). Ugly incidents and revelations erupt in corrosively cruddy Long Beach. De Niro says, "It looks like the Serbian Army's been here." Cracking to the surface is De Niro's reticence. He had buried his youth here. His father had been executed for murder in a kidnapping gone wrong, and added to this already burdened movie is, atavism – the possible inheritance of an ancestor's abnormality. Other grinding themes gnarl the plot, seemingly ludicrous and unfortunately, they're mostly talked and talked about. But, the story from a 1997 Esquire article, is a true account of Vincent La Marca who, at the premiere party, thought the film took some liberties, but how could he possibly ask for better? I could. The movie clutches, and holds, even at it's lowest ebb.

Considering the lowest ebb of Long Beach that not so long was a beach paradise, this morality tale includes that tragedy as well. Our culture is a flighty one. We can enjoy a Heaven and, without a thought, let it go to Hell.

Mike Vilensky's
MINI - MOVIE REVIEWS

Lions for Lambs

A stellar cast of Tom Cruise as a congressman, Meryl Streep as a journalist, and Robert Redford as a journalist, finds themselves drawn into an investigation of two injured American soldiers in Afghanistan. It's the movie that Katie Holmes ran to see after finishing the New York City Marathon, and while it probably wasn't worth all the burning in her legs, the political drama delivers.

Fred Clause

'Tis the season for campy Christmas films, and I personally find that they never get old. In this season's early Christmas crop, Vince Vaughn plays Santa Claus' little-known brother who, in an Ashlee Simpson-esque move, gets tired of playing second fiddle and moves back to the North Pole to gain his own fame. Juvenile behavior ensues in a film for juveniles that could have waited until at least after Thanksgiving.

Sticking with the holiday season motif, this horror movie finds a career-driven woman trapped in her workplace's parking garage by a sadistic security guard on Christmas Eve! If you aren't tired of the torture genre yet, you may enjoy this truly scary set-up. Just don't take the kids to this twisted holiday bloody-skinflick.

Bee Movie

Hamptonite Jerry Seinfeld returns to the big screen as the voice of a recent college graduate bee, disillusioned by the job market for bees, which is severely limited to solely making honey. As the bee travels around New York City, he sets out on a path to change his fate and meets a bee voiced by another fellow Hamptons local, Renée Zellweger. In production since 2003, dare I pun that this film has garnered a ton of buzz?

American Gangster

Ridley Scott directs Denzel Washington and Russell Crowe, who play 1970s Harlem gangsters. When the heroine kingpin is dethroned, complications and gunfights ensue in this film that has so much public and critical buzz it would be far more shocking if it weren't one of the best films of the year.

Rendition

A CIA analyst witnesses an unorthodox interrogation session at a secret detention facility outside the U.S., causing him to question his assignment. With Alan Arkin and Meryl Streep to back up Jake Gyllenhaal and Reese Witherspoon as well as an Oscar-winning director guiding all of them, this film may manage to transcend tabloid speculation about its stars and the political awkwardness of its thinly-veiled accusations.

Dan in Real Life

Steve Carrell stars as an advice columnist and single dad who falls in love with the perfect girl, played by Juliette Binoche. She's smart, funny and beautiful. Her only flaw is that she's in a relationship with his brother. Ouch. In what is ironically not real life but rather a movie, Carrell and Dane Cook make light out of that sticky situation.

We Own The Night

Joaquin Phoenix and Mark Wahlberg play brothers who took decidedly different paths in life - one a nightclub owner, the other a police officer. But a dangerous confrontation with mobsters causes the brothers to reunite, and, in between near fatal accidents, shoot-outs, and confusing, complex plotlines, perhaps reconcile.

Martian Child

The name really says it all for this one. A writer and recent widower played by John Cusack adopts a troubled young boy who may or may not be an alien, in this film that may or may not be enjoyable.

30 Days of Night

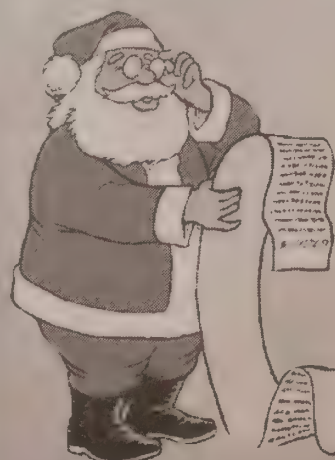

Unidentified vampire/zombie/monsters attack for unspecified reasons in a small town in Alaska in this film which is surprisingly fun to watch, and more fun to laugh at afterwards.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Viewing the varied and colorful heads of cauliflower lined up like bowls of jewels in their leafy protection at the Green Thumb Farmers market was a virtual trip to Italy – the white cauliflower from Milan, green cauliflower from Rome, purple cauliflower in Catania, and even one in orange. This aristocratic vegetable, which peaks with the first chill of early fall, with supplies generally lasting into winter, has been growing on Long Island since the Seventeenth century.

When Mark Twain wrote, "Cauliflower is nothing but cabbage with a college education," he intended it as a "pleasantry" – as the vegetable, aptly described, is from the cabbage family. The "educated" allows one part of the plant to develop at the expense of others. Basically the cauliflower was developed as a precocious annual, which, instead of opening its flowers like broccoli, if left unpicked, forms them into a head, a modified compact mass of undeveloped flowers technically called the curd. A large number of subvarieties are bred from both cauliflower and broccoli, thus the varied colors.

Cauliflower may be available all year long but locally grown, its fresh neutral flavor becomes a foil for a variety of tasty dishes.

SWEET AND SOUR CAULIFLOWER

Prepare this do-ahead simple Chinese salad recipe two days before serving so the cauliflower absorbs the flavor of the marinade.

- 1 carrot, trimmed and scraped clean
- 1 small head cauliflower or one-third head, trimmed
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 1 cup white wine vinegar
- 2 teaspoons salt for the cooking water

1. Slice the carrot into thin slices or cut into 1/2-inch lengths to fit the feed tube of your processor. Use the thin disk and process with light pressure to get uniform slices.

2. Cut away the outer leaves and hard core of the cauliflower and break into florets. Dissolve sugar in water and set aside.

3. Bring 6 cups of water to the boil and add salt. Put in cauliflower and cook just until the water returns to the boil. Lift out florets and drain well on paper towels. Cool. Layer the vegetables, alternately in a large covered jar. Pour over the sugar-vinegar solution and refrigerate for at least two days before serving. Sweet and sour cauliflower will keep refrigerated for up to one week.

JULIE SAHNI'S GLAZED CAULIFLOWER WITH GINGER

In her cookbook Classic Indian Cooking, Morrow, 1980, Julie Sahni imparts the secrets to mastering the art of Indian cooking. The following dish is flavored with turmeric, cumin and fresh ginger shreds.

Serves 4-6

- 1 small head cauliflower, about 1 1/4 pounds
- 4 tablespoons light vegetable oil
- 1 teaspoon coriander seeds or 1/2 teaspoon cumin
- 1 1/2 tablespoons shredded fresh ginger root
- 1-2 green chilies, seeded and chopped (optional)
- 1/2 teaspoon turmeric
- 1 teaspoon kosher salt
- 1/2 cup hot water
- 1 1/2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons fresh coriander leaves, chopped coarsely

1. Separate the cauliflower into small flowerets (about 1-1 1/2 inch pieces), cutting them with a knife if necessary. Wash them under running cold water, and drain. On a surface next to the stove, place all the spices, the drained cauliflower, and 1/4 cup hot water.

2. Heat 3 tablespoons of the oil over medium-high heat in a large skillet. When the oil is very hot, add coriander or cumin, and fry until the seeds turn dark brown, about 10 seconds. Add ginger and chilies, if using, and stir for a couple of seconds working fast. Immediately add turmeric and salt, and follow at once with the cauliflower. Stir rapidly to distribute the spices and to prevent burning. Add the hot water; reduce heat and cook, covered, until the cauliflower is fully cooked to crispy tenderness (about 20-25 minutes). Stir two or three times during cooking. (The cauliflower may be cooked up to this stage and set aside, covered for several hours.)

3. Increase heat to medium, and stir-fry to evaporate any moisture remaining in the pan and to lightly brown the cauliflower (about 5-10 minutes). Stir carefully, as cooked cauliflower is usually very fragile and breaks easily. If the vegetable looks a little dry, stir in the remaining oil. Add lemon juice and chopped coriander leaves, and toss gently. Check for salt, and serve immediately.

CAVOLFIORIO CON PASTA

When cauliflower is plentiful at the farm stands, prepare the cauliflower sauce below. Transfer the sauce to a gratin dish, top with additional cheese, cover securely then freeze for Thanksgiving dinner.

Serves 4-6

1 medium head cauliflower, about 1 1/2 - 2 pounds

1/4 cup olive oil

5 cloves garlic, finely chopped

1 1/2 cups peeled and seeded tomatoes, about 3 medium

Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper

1/2 - 3/4 cup freshly grated Parmesan or pecorino cheese

1-pound package ridged penne or other short tubular pasta

Coarse (kosher) salt for the pasta water

2-3 tablespoons finely chopped Italian parsley

1. Remove the leaves and core from the cauliflower and pull away the florets from the base. Soak the florets in a bowl of cold water for about 20 minutes. Meanwhile, bring 4-5 quarts water to the boil, put in the florets and cook until tender but still firm, about 10-15 minutes. (Place a piece of stale bread in the cooking water to absorb any odor.) Test with a fork for doneness. Drain the florets and set aside.

2. Pour olive oil in a large skillet over medium heat. When oil is warm add the garlic and saute about 40-50 seconds until garlic is lightly golden. Add tomatoes and stir to mix. Add the cooked, well-drained florets, breaking them up with a fork and season with salt and pepper. Keep turning the vegetable and cook for a few minutes longer. Add grated cheese one or two minutes before the sauce is done and stir to mix.

3. Meanwhile, bring 4-5 quarts water to a full rolling boil, add 1-2 tablespoons coarse salt and put in the pasta. Cook until al dente or firm to the bite, about 8-10 minutes according to the brand. Drain well and transfer the pasta to a warm serving dish.

4. Reheat the sauce briefly, taste for seasoning and pour over the pasta. Toss to mix very well, garnish with parsley and serve hot.

Dining in the Hamptons

It's All About the Sides

Abraham Lincoln proclaimed Thanksgiving a National holiday to remind the American people of their blessings of "fruitful fields and healthful skies." Before Lincoln's proclamation, Thanksgiving was not marked by food and drink but rather a day set aside for prayer and fasting. Lincoln began the holiday that we know today after a series of editorials from a woman named Sarah Josepha Hale who had persistently pushed for the annual turkey day. In a time of war, our country needed this holiday to focus on what they had not what they had lost. People began giving thanks to God for the things that they had at the end of the harvest season by sitting down with family and enjoying the fruits of their labors.

The first Thanksgiving menu consisted of venison and wild fowl. Back then the meal revolved around many different types of meat. Today we have one. Turkey is the main dish in this beloved holiday feast, but what makes the meal interesting, cultural and special for individual families are the dishes that accompany the turkey. Side dishes can be regional, cultural and private family traditions. During Civil War times cranberry sauce was added to the meal to make the northeasterners feel more at home, while sweet potatoes were incorporated to welcome the southerners.

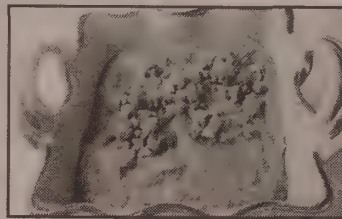

A traditional New England Thanksgiving consists of New England stuffing, mashed potatoes, mashed turnips, creamed onions, cranberry sauce, buttered rolls, celery sticks, pumpkin pie and pumpkin bread. The tradition remains in most people's Thanksgiving dinners with stuffing, mashed potatoes and pumpkin pie but there are variations that exist. In the south, of course, sweet potatoes are a must. Many Southerners add collard greens, corn bread, white gravy, dumplings, string bean casserole and macaroni and cheese to the table. Italians have been known to add lasagna to the menu. Many Jewish families include Noodle Kugel, a sweet dessert pudding, on the side. My Jewish family always had potato latkes as well. The Latino community often adds beans and rice to the feast. Each family may have their own special side dish that they eat with Thanksgiving dinner. My family lives in Kentucky and our meal is not complete without corn pudding, a recipe that came to us through our dear friend from Alabama.

It is through sharing each other's recipes that we learn something interesting and traditions begin. Some delicious ideas for potatoes include, garlic scalloped potatoes with extra heavy cream and garlic give an alternative to mashed. Spicy sweet potatoes can liven things up by using cumin and spicy paprika to add a kick to the traditional dish. Whipped sweet potatoes with caramelized apples are a sweet way to entice the children. Also, for the kids, caramel popcorn crusted sweet potatoes. For the party side, Mojito mashed sweet potatoes, made with rum, limes and mint. Whether they taste good or not the idea is impressive. Potato-mushroom pie sounds great because it involves cheese and finally, potato onion cakes, which are made with balsamic vinegar and dark brown sugar, look divine.

Since we are not counting calories on this glorious holiday, there are a lot of yummy ways to prepare the other vegetables. Caramelized bacon brussels sprouts are mouth watering, sautéed in balsamic vinegar, sugar, salt and pepper. Green bean casserole has to have breadcrumbs, cheese and heavy cream. Roasted carrots can be doused in ginger and honey. Warm cabbage may join the buffet cooked with bacon and Gorgonzola. You could also try braised collard greens, mustard greens and red

Swiss chard made with Swiss cheese and mustard or mashed yellow turnips with crispy shallots.

Vegetables are also a great choice, but the side that means the most to many of us on Thanksgiving Day is stuffing or dressing. It seems like everyone has their own recipe for this dominant side dish. Here are some fun ideas to keep in mind – corn bread, pecan and wild mushroom stuffing, pumpkin stuffing, chorizo sausage and cheddar cheese stuffing and finally, potato and sausage dressing. When preparing the dressing don't forget to save your turkey giblets!

Football, beer, napping and family are national pleasures that unite all Americans on this day for giving thanks. We have so much to be thankful for this year and as when Lincoln proclaimed the fourth Thursday in November a national holiday, today we are also in a state of war and must relax, reflect and enjoy the fruits of our labor.

– Lauren Isenberg

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"CHICK FLICKS" AT SARA NIGHTINGALE GALLERY

Leave it to Water Mill's Sara Nightingale Gallery to mount an "edgy" and provocative show coinciding with the recent Hamptons International Film Festival. Yet "Chick Flicks" isn't necessarily taking advantage of the Festival's proximity. The exhibition exists on its own merits by calling attention to the image of women, both in cinema and society at large.

The term itself, "chick flicks," refers to the relatively recent reference to films that empower women, a definite improvement over traditional depictions, which saw females as either virgins or whores. (Such a dichotomy was first developed by Marjorie Rosen in her book, Popcorn Venus, and later by East Ender Molly Haskell in her publication, From Reverence to Rape.) It was understood that the virgin / whore division was not always a literal one.

Sara Nightingale has assembled a show that signifies this division whether she realizes it or not. By so doing, she has also called attention to female images prevalent in certain movie genres whether the viewer realizes it or not.

Take, for example, the virgin image predominating horror films like Fay Wray's character in King Kong. Jillian McDonald's "There Goes the

Seidenfeld's "Dial 'M' For Murder"

Neighborhood" is a good example of the influence of Night of the Living Dead, complete with a blood-splattered innocent bride / virgin.

Conversely, McDonald's "Welcome to Your Worst Nightmare" features a woman with a cleaver. Here, the female becomes the victimizer/whore, a horror convention established by English horror movies during the 1960s.

The western genre also has its virgin / whore dichotomy: the school marm vs. the salon singer. In

E.B. Froehlich's "Vanessa's Dream," the scantily-clad woman (whore) is juxtaposed with a back-grounded cowboy standing by a dead horse. Did the femme fatale do them both in? If that's the case, it's a definite satirical and surreal statement on the demise of the old west. It's apparent as well that the woman in this work didn't see the film, My Heroes Have Always Been Cowboys.

Mark Seidenfeld's "Dial M for Murder" demonstrates more subversion as Grace Kelly's blond virgin in Alfred Hitchcock's film is transformed into a dark-haired Asian whore waiting by the phone.

What's intriguing is that Hitchcock always presented his heroines initially as cold, virgin-like women on the surface, revealing soon that they were really sexually seductive females underneath.

The presence of both kinds of women is also explored in Christa Maiwald's video, War Dance. Here, two girls are shown as both playful teenagers and worldly women, equally innocent and wise. The split screening is an effective device, its fragmentation connoting these two contradictory images.

"Chick Flicks" will be on view at the Sara Nightingale Gallery until Nov. 19. Call 631-726-0076.

HONORING THE ARTIST: DAVID KORNRUMPF

This week's cover artist has an especially strong affinity for ponds and inlets as the title, "East Hampton Pond" indicates. While David Kornrumpf may have grown up in both Holland and England, it's clear that his heart belongs on the East End.

Q: How did you end up in England even though you're not English?

A: My parents loved history so England was perfect; my father's position in banking also brought him to England.

Q: How was the educational system there? Any art classes?

A: I went to English public schools with all boys. In those days, no girls were the norm. From 14-18 years of age, I went to boarding school. At school I won awards in art, but there wasn't any real art teaching in England. When I was 14, I decided that I was going to be an artist. I had a goal.

Q: Were there artists in the family?

A: My father was an avid gardener; my mother drew, and both my sisters draw. My parents encouraged me in my art.

Q: How did you get your formal art training if not in England?

A: After I graduated in England, I came back to the U.S. and studied at Southampton College with Robert Mumford. I also took night classes with someone who taught me illustration because he said I was good at it. I learned how to use color. But I decided illustration was not for me. After I finished college my parents said I could come back to England where they were still living or stay in the U.S. I decided to stay.

Q: How would you describe your style?

A: It's kind of impressionistic. There's not a lot of line work going on. I use blending areas, agitated line and brush strokes.

Q: Who were some of your influences?

A: Monet for his color, Van Gogh for his brush strokes. Durer for his pen and ink work. When I paint, I keep some art books open of their work.

Q: Has your style changed through the years?

A: It's gotten more impressionistic. I was working in construction and I got hurt. A friend said to paint with my left hand. Then I started working with both hands. That definitely influenced my style.

Q: How has your subject matter changed?

A: I'm doing seascapes and landscapes now; five years ago, I was doing a lot of sunsets.

Q: Your method of working hasn't changed though.

A: I still take photographs and paint from them. If there's anything that needs adjusting in the photograph, I do it in my painting. I try and put myself in my work.

Q: Would you like to paint elsewhere or are you satisfied capturing the scenes here?

A: I get satisfaction painting here, little bays, nooks and crannies, multiple ponds. I especially love the reflections on the ponds.

Q: You seem to discover these ponds and nooks all over the place, like the North Shore, Shelter Island, where your parents now live, and Hampton Bays where you live.

A: Yes, I'll always paint these, and I may try pen and ink in the future. And there are always landscapes.

— Marion Wolberg Weiss

Mr. Kornrumpf will be in a group show at the Southampton Cultural Center, sponsored by the Southampton Artists Association in late November.

Keep The Roads Safe

This fall, remember that car safety should be high on your list of things to do. As a result you will help keep our East End community safe wherever the road may take you – Montauk to Manhattan and beyond. Here's an overview of a safety checklist that you should not be without.

One of the most important things an owner of a car should do is familiarize themselves with the owner's manual. Following the recommended service checkups should be as automatic as getting an oil change. Rotate the tires on a regular basis, especially if you have taken road trips during the summer and have put considerable mileage on the car. During excessive heat, your tires take a beating.

Now's a good time to check out the condition of the tires and while you are at it, have the spare checked as well.

Have your wheels aligned about every two years by a reliable technician and have them give your brakes a testing as well. You can tell your wheels need testing when you start to have to pull your wheel in a different direction too much. Instead of it being perfect on center, it favors one side a bit too much. You'll find yourself trying to manually straighten it out all the time.

Listen to your brakes. Are they squealing, grinding or screeching? The brake pads could be deteriorating if you are hearing these sounds.

Make sure all your fluids are topped off. Check the transmission, power steering, windshield washer fluids, radiator coolant and brake fluids.

Oil changes can greatly increase the longevity of your vehicle. Change and replace your air filter as per recommended in the manual.

If your car hesitates when starting, idles too fast (or too slow), or stalls when you least expect it, have it checked out before the cold weather settles in. No sense being in an isolated area with a car that is giving you a hard time.

Keep your windows clean and make sure there are no obstructions on the dashboards that will cause a glare when driving. Newspapers, maps or white pamphlets are real offenders. Try using one of those window cleaners such as Rain-X that turn rain into droplets. They also make one for the inside of the car if it tends to cloud up when the air or heat is turned on. Don't forget to do your little side mirrors too. Make sure you use a window cleaner made just for auto use. Don't use Windex, you'll be doing them more often than you bargained for.

Regularly clean and vacuum your car. Dust and dirt from the road finds its way into the car, causing hard-to-clean floors and seats. If you have leather, use a good cleaner for leather only. There are fast drying cloth shampoos for your seats, and Febreze now also makes a spray air freshener for cars.

Change your floor mats once they start to get tattered. If the ends start to loosen, your foot can get caught. Don't use any mats that crawl up to the gas and brake pedal. They are truly a hazard. Dispose of them and get a heavy-duty mat for under your feet.

And ladies, keep an old spare of comfortable shoes in the car so that you can preserve your heels and good shoes.

Happy Motoring!

It's Heaven at Gurney's Spa

I laid back in the swirling tub of seawater with jets pounding my body as Martha sprinkled Hinoki mint mineral bath particles into the water. I watched as foamy mounds of suds emerged from the water, creating great puffs of "clouds," all around me.

This was it – I had arrived in heaven at Gurney's Spa. I was in the middle of a 90-minute, new Signature therapy called the Vitalizing Sento Ritual, using exceptional ingredients and pure scents from Japan. I closed my eyes in the dimly lit room and listened to the soft sounds of bubbling water, as the soapy bubbles piled up over my head, arms and neck. The jets alternated between warm and cool, and in intensity along my back and legs, as I slowly melted into the mood and forgot all my cares this morning.

Martha, my therapist for this soothing treatment, took a towel and gently wiped the soapy mounds away from my face, as I was dreaming, about being enveloped in white cotton candy. The whole experience put me in a dreamy trance – the perfect escape on a cold, rainy November morning in Montauk.

The Vitalizing Sento Ritual, one of the first Japanese treatments to come to Gurney's Spa, is designed to release, purify, energize and soften the skin. "This body treatment is founded on the principle of stimulating blood flow through the body, by blending layers of Japanese products deeply into the skin. This treatment is inspired by the sensual and thorough art of caring for the body, developed and perfected in Japan," it states in the brochure.

The Sento Ritual begins with the entire body being hydrated with sea algae wash, and then gently scrubbed with ginger grass bamboo to exfoliate the dead skin and help remove toxins. I loved the feeling of this exfoliation process, which left my whole body tingling and energized. Martha then used a wild cherry blossom rice buff, which she gently tapped all over my body to nourish and soften my skin. In Japan, cherry blossom is used to keep the skin healthy and youthful. As I sank further into the table, she misted my face and body lightly with a refreshing rose camellia plum soft water, which revived my skin. But for me, the ultimate indulgence was when she poured wild lime silk oil all over my body, to soak in and create a warm glow. This sensual-scented oil is used in Japan to boost new cell growth, with its high Vitamin C content and elastin production.

Martha then slathered plum blossom silk cream, which seals in moisture and softens especially around the feet, elbows and hands.

Each of these Red Flower products of Japan were formulated to prepare the skin for the next step, leaving the skin softened, purified and scented.

As I slipped into the tub, all these products steamed their way into my pores. This Japanese cleansing regimen has been perfected for centuries, and a hot bath is the perfect way to end a day.

Also at Gurney's Spa, I was indulged in another new treatment – the Perfection Complexion Facial. I entered a softly lit room and laid back in a chair so that Oriana could examine my face. With her 17 years of experience as an esthetician at Gurney's Spa, she could see right away that my sometimes too-pink skin needed "calming down." So she recommended I try this new 70-minute facial, catered to my own needs. The Complexion Perfection Facial is described as a "super anti-aging, skin strengthening, free radical-blasting treatment that utilizes cutting edge ingredients to brighten the skin and deliver concentrated vitamins, anti-oxidants, plant extracts, and hydrators," according to Gurney's skin specialists.

Oriana put me into a trance, as she alternated between massaging my face and neck, and applying a series of special products from Emergin C including Multi-Fruit Cleanser, Peach Toner, and a Vitamin C serum that fights free radical damage, helps produce collagen, improves skin tone and texture, fights sun damage and pigmentation, and fights inflammation. To eliminate redness and strengthen skin, she then used D-Red Nighttime Strengthening Balm, which felt refreshing on my sun-bathed skin. The amazing Complexion-Perfection serum was then applied to instantly transform my skin with potent antioxidants, retinol, vitamins and minerals. My face felt and looked incredibly silky and radiant. When I was finished and looked in the mirror, I saw a younger, more vibrant version of my former self, from this Complexion-Perfection, in the skilled hands of Oriana.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

As I write my last "Real Estates" I reflect on the amazing transition that the business of real estate in the Hamptons has undergone over the past five years. In that time we have watched property values more than triple in general and under exceptional circumstances, reach record-breaking heights of an incalculable proportion. We have seen estates here become as famous as the celebrities that have inhabited them.

In that time the East End has gone from housing small town personalized brokerage firms that once dotted the villages to real estate moguls; mega corporations such as Corcoran, Prudential, Sotheby's and Brown Harris Stevens now controlling most all of the East End deals. Corcoran has been a front-runner this year opening a record number of new offices from Westhampton to Montauk and holding some of the most lavish open house events the East End has ever seen. The powerhouse realtor also closed the highest grossing deal the East End has ever seen this summer when the De Menil estate on Further Lane in East Hampton closed at a phenomenal $103 million dollars. The 40-acre oceanfront estate sold to Wall Street financial wizard, Ron Baron. The deal broke all records and even those who expected the long rumored sale to go in the $90 million range were astounded at the final price. The estate's historical buildings made history themselves early this season when they were paraded down Main Street and moved from the site in order to preserve them. Occurrences such as these do not shock East Enders who are quite familiar with the lengths that we can go through in the name of preservation. Groups such as the Peconic Land Trust or the Nature Conservancy are always keeping a watchful eye on the East End's most precious commodity, its natural beauty. Tens of thousands of acres have been saved by such groups in the last ten years.

There is also no task too great when it comes to estate owners on a mission. The historic Maycroft estate in North Haven set on its sprawling bay front acreage was another landmark sale. The home was sold to a single party after much talk of the possible development of McMansions on the site and frantic fundraising by the town. The Victorian mansion was not only completely restored but also completely repositioned in order for its new owner to have a better water view. When Jerry Seinfeld bought the East Hampton estate of Billy Joel and his former wife Christy Brinkley, he not only tore down and built anew but also added his own private baseball diamond. Billy Joel, who has owned numerous estates here, purchased the oceanfront home of Roy Schieder this summer and is now looking to pick up the parcel next door. Christy Brinkley also has multiple joint holdings here along with most recent former husband Peter Cook that hit well over the $50 million mark. Cook is a famed East End architect who created the quintessential trademark

"Hampton's style" homes found through out the East End.

In Montauk, the Church Estate, AKA the Warhol compound, was the first estate to list at a record breaking $50 million. The celebrity enclave was considered the most valuable piece of real estate on the Eastern seaboard at the time, but when the Burnt Point Estate on Georgica Pond came on with a price tag to match, it was the beginning of a new era in East End real estate. The stunning and elaborate estate sold to pharmaceutical magnate Stewart Rahr for a whopping $45 million, breaking all records at that time. The Church Estate, although one of the most famous and talked about estates in the country, languished on the market till the very unique compound sold to Millard Drexler, CEO of J.Crew, in 2006. Since that sale in 2003, the market has been pushing full steam ahead and commercial properties on the East End have been added to the mix and are fetching outrageous numbers. The Montauk Yacht Club on Star Island sold earlier this year at $34 million to Andrew Farkas of Island Global Yachting. Farkas, who is the billionaire responsible for elaborate development taking place in Dubai, has bought up various Montauk properties.

There is now big money circulating on the East End, the likes of which these small towns have never seen and the sky is truly the limit. The area, thanks to global communication, is attracting buyers from all over the world and not just multimillionaires coming out, but billionaires with enough cash to buy a small town. In the next few years it will be interesting to see how it all plays out. But till then, one thing is for sure – the high-end market on the East End is very much alive and doing very well.

Dear Dan,

Mr. Clemente is a gifted writer, however, in his coverage of the Morpurgo auction last week it's clear that your reporter got caught up in the drama of his own story telling.

My lawsuit and successful auction saved the house from being lost. The village tax hadn't been paid in nearly five years. For the past decade, I've had to borrow from friends and credit cards in order to prevent the town from foreclosing.

Last winter, the Fire Inspector instructed my sister to vacate the premises because the house was "Unfit for human occupancy." The house could have been condemned.

My lawsuit has resulted in making my sister a rich woman who has options. She no longer has to live in the stench of a house that has no heat or running water.

Sincerely,
Helga Morpurgo

SAVE THIS TOWN

Dear Dan,

The advantage of having time on my side is that my vision recall can select from the best of the past old charm and new progressions, If you are an "almost artist," and if you paint regularly as I do it makes for a tangy graphic mix.

Have I painted the back of Main Street scene 150 times in the past twenty years? No, maybe 250, always looking for "the one." Asking myself: Has it (Sag Harbor) changed? Is it (my art) getting better? Both answers are, a little.

This undivided engagement with that set buildings comes easy when you live on those back streets and observe daily. From high up on the landing of my wooden staircase as I close my turquoise door, I get a full wide long view of all of the back of Main Street.

Sag Harbor has changed. Much has been good. Main Street remains an interesting mix of small shops and restaurants. There is no service that is missing in this village within walking distance from most homes. There is harmony and liveliness. Even in the undistinguished area of the municipal lot in the back of Main Street, there is some "Whaler" charm. Have the historic houses been "scientifically" over restored? I think so, but not ruined yet.

There are the new plans for giant stores and more residences that edge up to each other on the bay front, on Route 114, in the back of Main Street. A schism of people/trucks, domicile quiet/commercial traffic, and all need more pavements for parking lots.

I hope for crystal, ESP vision when the village planners make the next set of decisions for the center and waterfront of this village.

I hope you enjoy my twenty year synthesis of "The Back of Main Street: The Ideal, Variety, Sag Harbor Paradise."

Julienne Moses
Sag Harbor and NYC

P.S. Please use this letter and art in any way you choose to express my hope that Sag Harbor will find a way to detach from more commercial development and focus on residential expansion.

Sag Harbor, Julienne is watching you. —DR

THE INN AT QUOGUE IS OPEN

Dear Mr. Rattiner,

I represent the ownership of the Inn at Quogue. In your recent story, you made two statements that are incorrect. First, the Inn at Quogue has remained open all year long since we acquired it in 1999, so we will not close up this winter. I would appreciate your correcting this statement in your article, as it does not help our business for you to advertise that we are not open for business.

In addition, please be aware that Mr. Lettieri has not yet acquired the Inn. He is under contract and will close soon, but the closing has not yet occurred as your article incorrectly stated.

Thank you for your effort to assist me in keeping the facts straight.

Very truly yours,
Hilton C. Smith, Jr.

Done. But "under contract" is "sold" if approved. —DR

GO AHEAD DON, READ HIM HIS WRONGS

Dear Dan,

Re: Quogue- Motz Story

Will you ever learn to get your facts for articles correct? In your recent piece about the Quogue mayor being sued...Rocco Leiteri "does not" own any part of the Inn at Quogue. He has had his plans before the planning board numerous times to get final approval so that the sale can go through. Leiteri purchasing the property depends on IF his plans are approved. It is still owned by family of William Murray (who just recently passed away).

The Inn is a wonderful old masterpiece as you have said, it should be preserved. The community does want it to stay as an old Inn. We are losing so much of the Hamptons on daily basis, is it really so surprising that someone (or group) would want to try and maintain the history of their community and actually fight for it?

Also, Barbara Williams is a nice woman, but your facts are not entirely correct there either but that is a much more personal matter. Please do your homework; your lack of attention to accuracy has been a chronic problem over many years.

Don Spellman
Via e-mail

I do get a lot right, though, don't I? —DR

Police Blotter

Chainsaw

Somebody stole a $1500 chainsaw from a business in Southampton in late October. Police believe that the destruction of several desks that were cut in half at a local business office are related.

* * *

Stolen Watch

A man reported a stolen Rolex from his home in East Hampton. The Rolex was valued at approximately $5,000. The man claimed that the theft occurred around 4 p.m., no wait, 3 p.m. if you count in Eastern Standard time.

* * *

Deer

A deer that was running too fast, flew down the side of a road and smashed right into the side of a car crossing an intersection and killed the car. The deer then ran off and did not file a report. Police were called in to remove the dead car carcass.

* * *

Two hunters were seen fighting in the woods by a couple that was hiking in Quogue. Neither one of the hunters had shells, which was what the whole fight was about. Apparently each hunter thought that the other was responsible for purchasing the shells. No arrests were made.

* * *

Punched

A guy punched another guy in the face at a Hampton Bays restaurant when remarks were made about the puncher's girlfriend. No charges were pressed, as the guy that got punched felt like he deserved it.

* * *

Cashmere Sweater

A cashmere sweater was reported stolen from a Sag Harbor home. The woman is offering "cash" for "merely" information on the theft.

* * *

Tomatoes

Tomatoes were reported stolen from a local farmers market in Sagaponack. Police are investigating a tip that a new ketchup line operating out of Bridgehampton is surprisingly delicious.

* * *

On The Job

While working at a construction site, a man was caught by police smoking a marijuana cigarette. Police arrested the man, who was just about to take his lunch break consisting of Cheetos and Beef Jerky.

* * *

Garbage Theft

A man in Watermill reported to police that somebody stole his $800 garbage cans from outside of his home. Well there you have it folks, we have $800 garbage cans now in the Hamptons officially.

* * *

Party At The Rich Guys House

A man reported to police that while he was away in New York City, a party took place at his house that he did not know about. When the man returned to his Watermill home, he found empty beer bottles everywhere and his house trashed. He was quoted saying, "Either it was one hell of a party that I simply don't remember having, or some !@#$% broke into my house and threw one without inviting me."

GLASS LIKE FINISHES!

It is the ultimate finish and usually reserved for fine furniture.

Our proprietary methods can be used as part of a normal repaint to provide furniture quality finishes on all trim and doors without the prohibitive costs! If you are thinking of repainting your Interior & possibly refinishing your floors give us a call.

We love wood and will do a free estimate and sample of this extraordinary finish!

Call Coastal Cedar 631-329-7063

We are a full service painting contractor with a specialty for finishing wood. A smooth and Glass-like finish is achieved by hand rubbing with fine
grits and waxes.

TODAY'S MARKET OFFERS REAL OPPORTUNITIES

- The opportunity to find the right property.
- The opportunity to sell your property at the right price.
- The opportunity to work with a broker who really listens to you.

In 2007 more than half of all homes sold on the East End have been sold by Corcoran. And on the East End we continue to outperform the national market. While national median sales prices fell 2.1% over the past 12 months, home prices on the East End increased 13.8%.*

*I welcome the opportunity to hear from you.
Together we will find you the right property or sell your property at the right price.*
